GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 3, February 1989

Copyright (C) 1989, 1999 Free Software Foundation, Inc. Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this License document, but changing it is not allowed.

[This is the first released version of the Lesser GPL. It also counts as the successor of the GNU Library General License, version 2.]

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom of distribution and to restrict your ability to improve the software. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software--to make sure the software is free for all its users.

This license, the Lesser General Public License, applies to some specially designated software packages--typically libraries--of the Free Software Foundation and other authors who decide to use it. You can use it too, but we suggest you only do so if you wish to combine your program with other free programs.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom of use, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for them) without in any way restricting your rights to use or modify them. In our free programs, you can often meet these requirements in two simple ways:

1. To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid distributors to deny you these rights or to attempt to restrict them. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the library or if you modify it.

For example, if you distribute copies of the library, you must either keep the source code with the distribution or provide a means for容易 retrieving the source code. You must also make sure that distributors receive copyright notices for the library, so that they can too protect your rights.

We protect your rights with two new methods: (1) we copyright the library, and (2) we offer you this License, which gives you legal protection to copy, distribute and/or modify the library.

To protect each distributor, we want to make it very clear that there is no warranty for the library, even if the library is modified by someone else and passed on. The recipients should know that what they are getting is certified to be the work of the original author(s), but that the original author(s) do not provide any warranty.

Finally, software patents pose a particular problem to the existence of free software. We wish to make sure that a company cannot effectively restrict the users of a free program by obtaining a particular license or patent for the program. To avoid this, the Lesser General Public License disclaims any patents that may be asserted against the modified or unmodified version of the program.

Most GNU software, including some libraries, is covered by the GNU General Public License. This License, the GNU Lesser General Public License, applies to certain designated libraries, and it is very different from the GNU General Public License. We use this license for certain libraries in order to protect linking those libraries into non-free programs.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared library, the whole of the program is no longer independent of any combination of the GNU GPL, LGPL, or a particular license of a particular library. It is the GNU Lesser General Public License that governs the whole program. This License disclaims any patents that may be asserted against the modified or unmodified version of the program.

We want to protect users' freedom of use of the program, so that it can be used to control their own machines. This is the only way to protect users' freedom from those who would attempt to restrict the users' freedom of use of the program. This License disclaims any patents that may be asserted against the modified or unmodified version of the program.

For example, our patent exceptions are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for them) without in any way restricting your rights to use or modify them. In our free programs, you can often meet these requirements in two simple ways:

General Public License applies to most of the Free Software Foundation's software and to any other program whose authors consent to using it. (Some other Free Software Foundation software is covered by other licenses. See the license notices that apply to your program, too.)

When you speak of this software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to share copies of Free Software with other people. For this to work, the license must require that you share it with others if you wish to do so. It is not a license that you can give away or use to restrict other people. It is the Free Software Foundation's license, and you have the right to use it.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid anyone to remove these rights. It is important to preserve the rights. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the software, or of new works derived from it.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether for profit or for a fee, you must make sure that everyone who gets a copy has the same freedom. You must make sure that they, too, receive the same rights. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this License which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.

You may make copies for your own use, and you may make copies for others, but you must make sure that everyone who gets a copy has the same freedom. You must make sure that they, too, receive the same rights. You must also make sure that they, too, receive the same rights.

Finally, any free program is threatened constantly by software patents. We wish to avoid the danger that restrictions of a free program will inadvertently create patent licenses, in effect making the program proprietary. To protect you, we have made it clear that any patent must be licensed for anyone's free use or to be licensed at all.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

END OF TERMS AND CONDITIONS

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Program

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be governed by the same license as the program you are distributing, you should take the following steps:

1. To do so, attach the following notices to the program. It is safest to attach them to the start of each source file to most effectively ensure the inclusion of warranty, and each file should have at least the "Copyright" line and a pointer to where the full notice is found.

One line to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does.
Copyright (C) year - name of author

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation, either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program; if not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA.

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode:

Copyright (C) year, name of author
This is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under certain conditions. See the file 'COPYING' for details.

The hypothetical command 'show w' and 'show c' should show the appropriate parts of the General Public License, or parts of the license that are relevant to the user's current activity. For example, 'show w' should show the warranty section, and 'show c' should show the copyright section.

You should also get your employer (if you work as a programmer) or school, if any, to sign a "copyright disclaimer" for the program, if necessary. Here is a sample; alter the names:

Yoyatzero, Inc. hereby disclaims all copyright interest in the program 'Connection' (which makes passes in computers) written by James Naughton.

Copyright of Y. Coy., 1 April 1989.
Y. Coy., President of Yoyatzero

This General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary programs. If you program is a subprogram of a proprietary program, you may use the terms of this license for the subprogram (when you are distributing it), but the entire program must be distributed under a license that is compatible with the license of the subprogram.

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you are free to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to make sure the software is free for all its users. This license applies to most GNU programs, and to any other program whose copyright owner has agreed to use it. Some other Free Software Foundation software is covered by the GNU Lesser General Public License instead. You can apply it to your programs, too.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for that service if you wish), that you receive source code, that you can do what you want with the code, and that you can improve the program and publish your improvements.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid anyone to deny you these rights or to ask you to surrender the rights. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the software, or if you modify it.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive or can get the source code. And you must show them these terms so they know their rights.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this license which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this free software. If the software is modified by someone else and passed on, we would like to see the new version only if its author states it in writing, and if you receive it you are notified of the date of this change and the address to write to if you wish to report the problem.

Finally, we want to make it clear that there is no warranty for the software, and we want to avoid the danger that redistributors of a free program will knowingly infringe patent licenses, in effect making the program proprietary. It is our intent that the license be seen as a license to copy, distribute and/or modify the program, not as a license to restrict others from doing so.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This license applies to any program or other work which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder stating it may be distributed under the terms of this license. The license is the license of the copyright holder, and it applies to the program or other work, not to the copyright holder's name. The license is the license of the copyright holder, and it applies to the program or other work, not to the copyright holder's name.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions. You may also distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code, provided that you preserve the copyright notice and this list of conditions in all distributions.

2. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option offer warranty protection in exchange for a fee.

3. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program in any portion at all, then forming a work based on the Program, and copy and distribute such modifications only if you comply with the following conditions:

a) You must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

b) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part contains or is derived from the Program or any part thereof, to be licensed under the same license as the Program, and you must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

c) If the modified program normally reads standard input interactively or is designed to execute without human intervention, it must output a notice that it was modified, in a way that is visible to the user. The notice must include the date of any change and the address to write to if you wish to report the problem.

d) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part contains or is derived from the Program or any part thereof, to be licensed under the same license as the Program, and you must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

e) If the modified program normally reads standard input interactively or is designed to execute without human intervention, it must output a notice that it was modified, in a way that is visible to the user. The notice must include the date of any change and the address to write to if you wish to report the problem.

f) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part contains or is derived from the Program or any part thereof, to be licensed under the same license as the Program, and you must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

g) If the modified program normally reads standard input interactively or is designed to execute without human intervention, it must output a notice that it was modified, in a way that is visible to the user. The notice must include the date of any change and the address to write to if you wish to report the problem.

h) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part contains or is derived from the Program or any part thereof, to be licensed under the same license as the Program, and you must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

i) If the modified program normally reads standard input interactively or is designed to execute without human intervention, it must output a notice that it was modified, in a way that is visible to the user. The notice must include the date of any change and the address to write to if you wish to report the problem.

j) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part contains or is derived from the Program or any part thereof, to be licensed under the same license as the Program, and you must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

k) If the modified program normally reads standard input interactively or is designed to execute without human intervention, it must output a notice that it was modified, in a way that is visible to the user. The notice must include the date of any change and the address to write to if you wish to report the problem.

l) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part contains or is derived from the Program or any part thereof, to be licensed under the same license as the Program, and you must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

m) If the modified program normally reads standard input interactively or is designed to execute without human intervention, it must output a notice that it was modified, in a way that is visible to the user. The notice must include the date of any change and the address to write to if you wish to report the problem.

10. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs whose distribution conditions are different, write to the author to ask for permission. For software which is copyrighted by the Free Software Foundation, write to the Free Software Foundation; for other programs, contact the respective copyright holders. We make exceptions for this: our permission is not required if you are distributing the program as a part of a larger work, or if you are distributing the program as a part of a larger work and are presenting the sharing and reuse of software generally.

NO WARRANTY

11. BECAUSE THE PROGRAM IS LICENSED FREE OF CHARGE, THERE IS NO WARRANTY FOR THE PROGRAM, TO THE EXTENT PERMITTED BY APPLICABLE LAW. EXCEPT WHERE SHOWN IN WRITING, THE COPYRIGHT HOLDERS AND OTHER PARTIES PROVIDE THE PROGRAM "AS IS" WITHOUT WARRANTY OF ANY KIND, EITHER EXPRESSED OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING, BUT NOT LIMITED TO, THE IMPLIED WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY AND FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. THE ENTIRE RISK AS TO THE QUALITY AND PERFORMANCE OF THE PROGRAM IS WITH YOU. SHOULD THE PROGRAM PROVE DEFECTIVE, YOU ASSUME THE COST OF ALL NECESSARY SERVICING, REPAIR OR CORRECTION.

12. IN NO EVENT SHALL THE COPYRIGHT HOLDERS OR OTHER PARTIES BE LIABLE FOR DAMAGES CAUSED BY THE PROGRAM OR BY THE USE OF THE PROGRAM, EVEN IF ADVISED OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGES. THE COPYRIGHT HOLDERS AND OTHER PARTIES BE LIABLE FOR DAMAGES CAUSED BY THE PROGRAM OR BY THE USE OF THE PROGRAM, EVEN IF ADVISED OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGES.

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Program

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be of the same general character as the program which you have received, you should take the following steps:

1. To do so, attach the following notices to the program. If it is not a copy of source code, it is not required to include the full text of these notices, but the copyright notice and a pointer to where the full text is found.

2. You must give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does. > Copyright (c) year, name of author.

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation, either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail. If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode:

8. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be published in spirit to the present version, but may address new problems or concerns.

Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the Program specifies a version number of this License which applies to it and any later version, you may choose to follow the terms and conditions which are set forth in that version of the License or in any later version published by the Free Software Foundation. If the Program does not specify a version number of this License, you may choose any version published by the Free Software Foundation.

10. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs whose distribution conditions are different, write to the author to ask for permission. For authors who accept by implication, the only way to avoid this is to put out a separate notice which says that you are not including the Program's code in its distribution. Our decision will be guided by the two goals of preserving the free status of all derivatives of our free software and of promoting the sharing and reuse of software generally.

NO WARRANTY

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Programs

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be of the greatest benefit to the public, the best way to achieve this is to make it free software which everyone can redistribute and change under these terms.

To do so, attach the following notices to the program. If it is not a shell script, it is safest to attach them to the start of each source file to avoid disturbing anyone's editor's preferences; and each file should have at least the "copyright" line and a pointer to where the full notice is found.

One line to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does:

Copyright (C) 2007 name of author

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation; either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode:

You should also get your employer (if you work as a programmer) or your school, if any, to give a written declaration that no copyright interest in the program is claimed or that any copyright interest that is claimed has been granted to you.

Preamble

The GNU General Public License is a free, copyleft license for software and other kinds of works.

The licenses for most software and other practical works are designed to allow you to share and improve the work by redistributing and/or modifying it. However, for many works there is a clear need for additional protection from those parties who would not respect the rights of copyright holders and users in the works that are derived from and build upon the original work. For this reason, the Free Software Foundation has developed this license to protect the rights of copyright holders and users in the works that are derived from and build upon the original work. You can apply it to your software, too.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for them if you wish), that you receive source code of any copy of the free software, that you can redistribute it, that you can adapt it to your needs, and that you know how to do these things.

To protect your rights, we need to prevent others from denying you these rights or asking you to surrender the rights. Therefore, you have certain responsibilities if you distribute copies of the software, to make sure you fulfill it: responsibility to respect the freedom of others.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must ensure that you also give each recipient the corresponding source code. You must make sure that they receive the source code, and you must show how these terms of the license apply to the code that you distribute.

Notwithstanding that we are the Free Software Foundation, we cannot and do not intend to take away any rights which you already possess, and you cannot take away rights that we do not have. You should also be aware that when you copy, modify or distribute the software, you are obliged to respect the copyright notice, to keep the license notice, to provide access to a copy of the source code, and to make sure you are given the same rights to the recipients as you are.

Some devices are designed to deny users access to install and run modified versions of the software, to prevent the user from using the software. This is fundamentally incompatible with the aim of the GNU General Public License to promote the freedom of use and the freedom to modify and improve the software. The authors of hardware do not wish to allow this kind of behavior, and we do not wish to authorize anyone to request or accept such a request. In such a case, you should consider that the manufacturer of the hardware is denying you the freedom to use the software. If the manufacturer has denied you the freedom to use the software, you should refuse to cooperate with the manufacturer in the future.

Finally, every program is threatened constantly by software patents. Our General Public License is not a patent, and it does not grant any patents. It does, however, protect the freedom of those who use the software, to make sure that the patent holder cannot be used to threaten the freedom of the community that uses the software. It is the responsibility of our users to oppose such threats. This license is intended to assure users the ability to make use of the software in the future, even if parts of the program are covered by patent or a similar form of intellectual property. To protect the users, the license prohibits the patent holder from threatening the ability of anyone to use the program non-commercially.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

0. Definitions.

"This License" refers to version 3 of the GNU General Public License.

"Copyright" also means copyright-like laws that apply to other kinds of works, such as semiconductor masks.

"The Program" refers to any copyrightable work licensed under this license. Each licensee is addressed as "you". "Licensees" and "recipients" may be individuals or organizations.

To modify a work means to copy it or derive all or part of the work in a form requiring copyright protection, other than the original or a copy made for the purpose of teaching or debugging the work, or for interoperability with existing or standard software, in a form and format for processing by automatic means, as long as all the underlying ideas, concepts, and algorithms remain the same, and is intended to be used in the same way as the original work.

A "covered work" means either the unmodified Program or a work based on the Program.

To "convey" a work means to do anything with it that, without restriction, would allow you to directly or indirectly transfer the work to another person who would then be able to convey it to a third person. This includes, but is not limited to, distributing copies of the work, renting the work, lending the work, leasing the work, and in some countries other activities as well.

To "convey" a work means any kind of propagation that enables other parties to make or receive copies. Mere interaction with a user through a computer network, with no transfer of a copy, is not conveying.

An interaction over a computer network is considered legal if, in the opinion of the user of the network, it is intended to be used in the same way as the original work, and is used in a manner consistent with the wishes of the copyright holder.

When you convey a copy of a covered work, you may at your option make any additional permissions from this copy, or from any part of it, in addition to the permissions granted by the license. You may not use technical measures to restrict recipients' ability to exercise the rights granted by the license to copy the material, to create derivative works, or to convey copies. You may not charge a fee for copying or conveying the material, or for exercising the rights granted by the license to copy the material, to create derivative works, or to convey copies.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this License, for material you add to a covered work, you may (if authorized by the copyright holder of that material) supplement the terms of this License with terms:

- a) Disclaiming warranty or limiting liability differently from the terms of sections 15 and 16 of this License; or
- b) Requesting preservation of specific copyrighted material notice and attribution for that material or for the Appropriate Legal Notices; or
- c) Prohibiting redistribution of the material or the Appropriate Legal Notices in forms that materially differ from the original version; or
- d) Limiting the use for publicity purposes of names of licensors or authors of the material; or
- e) Requesting preservation of specific copyrighted material notice and attribution for that material or for the Appropriate Legal Notices; or
- f) Prohibiting the use of trademarks or service marks of the licensor in ways that are not permitted by the license; or
- g) Anything else within the scope of section 11. You may not remove or alter the notices in any copies of the material.

All other permissions that may be added to this license must be in addition to the rights granted by the license. You may not use technical measures to restrict recipients' ability to exercise the rights granted by the license to copy the material, to create derivative works, or to convey copies. You may not charge a fee for copying or conveying the material, or for exercising the rights granted by the license to copy the material, to create derivative works, or to convey copies.

If you add terms to a covered work in accord with this section, you must place, in the relevant source files, a statement of the additional terms that apply to those files, or a notice indicating that the terms of this license apply to those files.

Additional terms, permitted or not-permitted, may be stated in the form of a separately written license, or stated as exceptions to the above requirements apply either:

1. Permission to copy, distribute, or modify a covered work in any medium, provided you prominently display the copyright notice and attribution for that material in the same manner as you did in the original work, and you include in the copy of the work a copy of this license and all applicable notices.
2. Permission to copy, distribute, or modify a covered work in any medium, provided you prominently display the copyright notice and attribution for that material in the same manner as you did in the original work, and you include in the copy of the work a copy of this license and all applicable notices.
3. Permission to copy, distribute, or modify a covered work in any medium, provided you prominently display the copyright notice and attribution for that material in the same manner as you did in the original work, and you include in the copy of the work a copy of this license and all applicable notices.

9. Acceptance Not Required for Having Copies. You are not required to accept a copy of the program in order to receive or run a copy of the program. Acceptance for a particular version of the program is implied by the fact that you run the program and it displays the copyright notice and attribution for that material in the same manner as you did in the original work, and you include in the copy of the work a copy of this license and all applicable notices.

10. Automatic Licensing of Downstream Recipients. Each time you convey a covered work, the recipient automatically receives a license from the original licensor, to the extent that you received a license from that licensor, to copy, distribute, or modify the work, subject to the provisions of this license. You are not required to provide a separate copy of this license to each recipient, but you must ensure that the recipient has a copy of this license.

11. Patents. A contributor's patent claims for inventions made in connection with the work that are covered by this license are licensed to the extent that they are necessary to make use of the work that is covered by this license.

12. No Surrender of Others' Freedom. If conditions are imposed on you by copyright law or by any other right that restricts the free copying, distribution, or use of the program, you must not impose any further restrictions on the recipients' exercise of the rights granted by this license.

13. Limitation of Liability. Notwithstanding any disclaimer or limitation of liability provided by any copyright holder or other party, you agree to provide warranty, if any, for the program as you received it.

14. Section 15 and 16. This license does not affect the legal force of any applicable law that restricts the free copying, distribution, or use of the program, or the legal force of any applicable law that restricts the free copying, distribution, or use of the program.

15. Interpretation of Sections 15 and 16. This license does not affect the legal force of any applicable law that restricts the free copying, distribution, or use of the program, or the legal force of any applicable law that restricts the free copying, distribution, or use of the program.

It is not the purpose of this section to induce you to infringe any copyright or other property right claim or to circumvent any copy control system. This section has the sole purpose of protecting the integrity of the free software distribution system, which is based on the mutual confidence of all those who participate in it. It is to be the author's/owner's decision to decide if or how to distribute software through any other system and a licensee cannot sue the author for that.

This section is intended to make thoroughly clear what is believed to be a consequence of the fact that this license.

12. If the distribution and/or use of the library is restricted in any way, the original copyright holder who places the library under this license will not be held responsible for any restrictions that may be placed on the library. In such case, this license incorporates the restrictions as if written at the end of this license.
13. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the Lesser General Public License from time to time. Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the library's license version number is different from the license version number, you may either use that version of the license or the license version number, but you must use the license version number of the library that you are distributing.
14. If you wish to incorporate parts of the library into other free software, you may do so by writing specific conditions in your program, provided that you include in the program a notice that you have included the library, that you have modified the library, and you have placed your program under the Lesser General Public License or a license approved by the Free Software Foundation.

NO WARRANTY
15. BECAUSE THE LIBRARY IS LICENSED FREE OF CHARGE, THERE IS NO WARRANTY FOR THE LIBRARY, TO THE EXTENT PERMITTED BY APPLICABLE LAW. EXCEPT WHEN OTHERWISE STATED IN WRITING THE COPYRIGHT HOLDERS AND/OR OTHER PARTIES PROVIDE THE LIBRARY "AS IS" WITHOUT WARRANTY OF ANY KIND, EITHER EXPRESSED OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING, BUT NOT LIMITED TO, THE IMPLIED WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY AND FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. THE ENTIRE RISK AS TO THE QUALITY AND PERFORMANCE OF THE LIBRARY IS WITH YOU. SHOULD THE LIBRARY PROVE DEFECTIVE, YOU ASSUME THE COST OF ALL NECESSARY SERVICING, REPAIR OR CORRECTION.

16. IN NO EVENT SHALL THE COPYRIGHT HOLDERS OR ANY OTHER PARTY BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR DAMAGES, INCLUDING ANY GENERAL, SPECIAL, INCIDENTAL OR CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES ARISING OUT OF THE USE OR INABILITY TO USE THE LIBRARY (INCLUDING THE COST OF PROCUREMENT OF SUBSTITUTE GOODS OR SERVICES), EVEN IF YOU HAVE BEEN ADVISED OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGES.

END OF TERMS AND CONDITIONS
How to Apply These Terms to Your New Libraries
If you develop a new library, and you want it to be of the greatest possible use to the public, we recommend making it free software and releasing it under the Lesser General Public License. You must do so, and you must include in the package a file named "COPYING" which contains the text of the Lesser General Public License.

To apply these terms, attach the following notices to the library. If you are only distributing the library as part of a larger program, you must attach the notices to the library, and you must also attach the notices to the program. If you are distributing the library as part of a larger program, you must attach the notices to the library, and you must also attach the notices to the program. If you are distributing the library as part of a larger program, you must attach the notices to the library, and you must also attach the notices to the program.

When you have to give the library's name and a brief idea of what it does, include the following text:

This library is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU Lesser General Public License for more details.

You should get your notices (if you work as a distributor) from your publisher, if any, or from the copyright holder, if the library, if necessary, here is a sample of what such a notice should contain:

Preamble
The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software. To assure this, the license must give permission for others to copy, distribute and modify the software. By thus permitting anyone to distribute the software, you are also committing yourself to give the same permission to anyone who obtains the software. This license grants to anyone exercising the rights granted by this license the right to make copies of the software for his or her private use, to modify and improve the software, to publish modified versions to others, and to use the software for other purposes.

When you speak of free software, you are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for them if you wish), that you receive source code or can get it if you wish, that you can change the software or use pieces of it freely in any new program you create, and that you are permitted to redistribute copies of what you have modified.

To protect your rights, we have added to the GPL several provisions that restrict the rights of others to restrict you. These provisions are written in legalistic language, but you should understand them in plain English. For example, if you distribute copies of a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive or can get the source code. And you must make sure that they, too, are given their legal rights.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this license, which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.
Also, for each author's protection and ours, we need to make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this free software. We write this in legalistic language, but you should understand it in plain English. We want the recipients to know that what they have is not the original, and that if there is a problem, they should contact the author or publisher.

Finally, we free program is threatened constantly by software patents. We wish to avoid this problem. For this reason, we have written this license to make it clear that anyone who conveys a copy of a program must also convey the source code for it, and that anyone who conveys the source code must also convey the rights to copy, distribute and/or modify it. We make this clear in the license to avoid lawsuits by anyone who tries to sue us for not enforcing the patent law.

certain countries either by patent or by copyrighted interfaces, the original copyright holder who places the Program under this License has an ethical obligation to take reasonable steps to ensure that countries that do not permit copying or distributing copies of the Program are not disadvantaged by the lack of a license which is otherwise available for countries which do permit copying and distribution of copies of the Program as it is written in the body of this License.

9. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be similar in spirit to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the Program specifies a version number of this License which applies to only one particular version of the software, you may choose to run that version of the software with a later version published by the Free Software Foundation. If the Program does not specify a version number of this License, you may choose any version ever published by the Free Software Foundation.

10. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs whose distribution conditions are different, write to the author of the Program to request that you be permitted to combine your program with the Program in a single work. An author who agrees to do this will authorize you to distribute the resulting work under a single license, which will generally be something you and he negotiate in writing. You may also do other things to distribute the Program under separate licenses from those of the Program, but you must not do anything to promote the sharing and reuse of software generally.

11. BECAUSE THE PROGRAM IS LICENSED FREE OF CHARGE, THERE IS NO WARRANTY FOR THE PROGRAM, TO THE EXTENT PERMITTED BY APPLICABLE LAW. EXCEPT WHEN OTHERWISE STATED IN WRITING THE COPYRIGHT HOLDERS AND/OR OTHER PARTIES PROVIDE THE PROGRAM "AS IS" WITHOUT WARRANTY OF ANY KIND, EITHER EXPRESSED OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING, BUT NOT LIMITED TO, THE IMPLIED WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY AND FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

12. IN NO EVENT SHALL THE COPYRIGHT HOLDERS AND/OR OTHER PARTIES BE LIABLE FOR DAMAGES arising from the use of the Program, including, but not limited to, general, special, incidental, or consequential damages, or for loss of data or profits, or for any business interruption, or for any actions taken in reliance on information contained in the Program, or for any actions taken in reliance on information contained in the Program, or for any actions taken in reliance on information contained in the Program, or for any actions taken in reliance on information contained in the Program.

ONE OF THESE CONDITIONS:

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Programs

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be of the greatest possible use to the public, the best way to achieve this is to place it in the public domain. However, if you prefer your program to be governed by the GNU General Public License, you should consider using the GNU General Public License for your program.

To do so, attach the following notice to the program. It is safest to attach these to the start of each source file to most effectively ensure the protection of warranty. We wish to make it clear that our copyright is not in the program and that you are free to copy and distribute it under any terms you wish.

Copyright (C) 1989, by author. All rights reserved. This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation; either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program; if not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA.

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode:

Copyright (C) 1989, by author. All rights reserved. This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation; either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

The hypothetical comment, "this or that" should only be used for the appropriate parts of the GNU General Public License. Of course, the comment you use may be different from the one shown here. The comment should read like this:

You should also get your employer (if you work as a programmer) or your school, if any, to sign a "copyright disclaimer" for the program, if necessary. Here is a sample; alter the names:

Yoyodyne, Inc., hereby disclaims all copyright interest in the program "FOOBAR" (which was passed to Yoyodyne) written by James H. Smith, Jr., on 12/31/89.

Signature of J. H. Smith, 12/31/89
J. H. Smith, President of Yoyodyne

This General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary programs. If you wish to distribute your program in a proprietary format, you should consider using the GNU General Public License for your program. If this is what you want to do, use the GNU Library General Public License instead of this License.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom of choice and the ability to modify the software. No software is free in the sense of freedom: freedom to make copies, freedom to improve the software, and freedom to redistribute copies. Freedom is the freedom of the user, not the software.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom of choice and the ability to modify the software. No software is free in the sense of freedom: freedom to make copies, freedom to improve the software, and freedom to redistribute copies.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid anyone to deny you these rights or to ask you to surrender the rights. These restrictions must be written in a way that makes sense to you and is fair to the community as a whole.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must allow anyone to receive a copy of it gratis. If you charge a fee for the software, you must allow anyone to receive a copy of it gratis. If you charge a fee for the software, you must allow anyone to receive a copy of it gratis.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this License which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that our General Public Licenses are understood by those who use the software. We want to make it clear that you have the freedom to copy, distribute and/or modify the software. We want to make it clear that you have the freedom to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.

Finally, every free program is threatened constantly by software patents. We wish to avoid the danger that redistributors of a free program will accidently infringe patent licenses, thereby making the program non-free. The specific terms are described in a separate document.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom of choice and control. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software—to make sure the software is free for all its users. The General Public License applies to most of the Free Software Foundation's software, and it also covers many programs made by other developers.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for them if you wish), that you receive source code or can get it if you wish, that you can change the software or use pieces of it in new free programs; and that you know your rights.

To protect your rights, we have added to the GPL several provisions that restrict others' actions to ensure that everyone has the same freedom as you have. These provisions are written in legal language to make sure the law respects and enforces your rights, rather than the other way around. You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with the program. If not, you can write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 51 Franklin Street, Boston, MA 02110-1301 USA, for a copy of the GNU General Public License.

Finally, many free programs are protected by patents. Your rights may be affected by these patents, and you should check the patent situation of your country, state or locality to see whether you can exercise the rights granted by the license.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License applies to any program or other work which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder stating it is licensed under the terms of this License. The program or other work may be a part of a larger program or other work, which contains the Program as a subpart. If the program or other work is licensed under the terms of this License, the subpart is licensed under the terms of this License.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you conspicuously and appropriately publish on each copy an appropriate copyright notice and disclaimer of warranty; keep intact all the notices that appear in the source code; and you must cause any copies of the Program to carry this license along with them.

2. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for your services that is greater than the cost of the physical act.

3. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program or any portion of it, thus forming a work based on the Program, and copy and distribute such modifications or your entire work based on the Program, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) You must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

b) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed under the terms of this License, to the extent it comes to be distributed under the Program (independent of any copying you may have done before the distribution).

c) If the modified program normally makes commands interactively usable on a system, you must then, whenever you run the Program on a system, cause the shell to display a command line and your user's name, so that you may see what command is being executed, and what the results are; and, if the modified program is not interactive, you must cause the shell to display a command line and your user's name, so that you may see what command is being executed, and what the results are.

d) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed under the terms of this License, to the extent it comes to be distributed under the Program (independent of any copying you may have done before the distribution).

e) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed under the terms of this License, to the extent it comes to be distributed under the Program (independent of any copying you may have done before the distribution).

g) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed under the terms of this License, to the extent it comes to be distributed under the Program (independent of any copying you may have done before the distribution).

h) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed under the terms of this License, to the extent it comes to be distributed under the Program (independent of any copying you may have done before the distribution).

i) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part is based on the Program, to be licensed under the terms of this License, to the extent it comes to be distributed under the Program (independent of any copying you may have done before the distribution).

Software Foundation. If the Program does not specify a version number of this License, you may choose any version ever published by the Free Software Foundation.

10. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs whose distribution conditions are different, write to the author of those programs to ask for permission. This permission is not necessary if you wish to use parts of the Program in a larger work distributed under the terms of this License. For more information on this subject, contact the author of the Program, or contact the Free Software Foundation; we sometimes make exceptions for this. Our decisions are guided by the two goals of preserving the free status of all derivatives of our free software and of promoting the sharing and reuse of software generally.

NO WARRANTY

11. BECAUSE THE PROGRAM IS LICENSED FREE OF CHARGE, THERE IS NO WARRANTY FOR THE PROGRAM, TO THE EXTENT PERMITTED BY APPLICABLE LAW. EXCEPT WHEN OTHERWISE STATED IN WRITING THE COPYRIGHT HOLDERS AND/OR OTHER PARTIES PROVIDE THE PROGRAM "AS IS" WITHOUT WARRANTY OF ANY KIND, EITHER EXPRESSED OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING, BUT NOT LIMITED TO, THE IMPLIED WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY AND FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. THE ENTIRE RISK AS TO THE QUALITY AND PERFORMANCE OF THE PROGRAM IS WITH YOU. SHOULD THE PROGRAM PROVE DEFECTIVE, YOU ASSUME THE COST OF ALL NECESSARY SERVICING, REPAIR OR CORRECTION.

12. IN NO EVENT UNLESS REQUIRED BY APPLICABLE LAW OR AGREED TO IN WRITING WILL ANY COPYRIGHT HOLDER, OR ANY OTHER PARTY WHO MAY MODIFY AND/OR REDISTRIBUTE THE PROGRAM AS PERMITTED ABOVE, BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR DAMAGES, INCLUDING ANY GENERAL, SPECIAL, INCIDENTAL OR CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES ARISING OUT OF THE USE OR THE INABILITY TO USE THE PROGRAM (INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO LOSS OF DATA OR DATA BEING RENDERED INACCURATE OR LOSSES SUSTAINED BY YOU OR YOUR BUSINESS OR OTHER PARTIES OR DAMAGE TO YOUR REPUTATION), EVEN IF SUCH HOLDER OR OTHER PARTY HAS BEEN ADVISED OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGES.

END OF TERMS AND CONDITIONS

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Program

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be of the greatest benefit to the public, the best way to achieve this is to make it free software which everyone can redistribute and change under these terms.

To do so, attach the following notices to the program. It is safest to attach them to the start of each source file to most effectively convey the decision of your distributors, and each file should have at least the "Copyright" line and a pointer to where the full notice is found.

One line to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does:
Copyright (C) <year> <name of author>

This program is free software; you can redistribute it under certain conditions under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation, either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program. If not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode:

Copyright (C) <year> <name of author>
This program is free software; you can redistribute it under certain conditions; type 'show' for details.

The interactive command 'show' or 'show <file>' should show the user's rights to the GNU General Public License, or if there is no network connection, to show the license text. The command 'show <file>' should show the user's rights to the GNU General Public License, or if there is no network connection, to show the license text.

You should also put your address (if you wish to be contacted) and your e-mail, if any, to give a "copyright notice" for the program, if necessary. Here is a sample of what the notice should look like:

Program, Inc., hereby disclaims all copyright interest in the program, "GNU Emacs", which was created by copyright holder <name of copyright holder>.

Signature of T. Cox, 1 April 1989
T. Cox, President of Emacs

This General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary programs. If your program is a subprogram of a proprietary program, it is more useful to permit linking proprietary applications with the library, so that they would not be redistributed by accident or design. See the section on Proprietary and non-Proprietary Libraries (or Modules).

This is the first released version of the Lesser GPL. It also counts as the successor of the GNU Library Public License, version 2, because the version number 2.1.

Prevents

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software to make sure the software is free for all its users.

This license, the Lesser General Public License, applies to some software which is packaged together with other software. It does not affect the other software, and is designed to ensure that the user can use the free software as part of a larger program.

When you speak of free software, you are referring to freedom of use, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you can do what you want with the software. You can share it, copy it, modify it, improve it, and distribute the result under the terms of your choice. You can even sell copies of the software. For example, you can sell a book containing the programs for a hard price, as long as the price is no more than the reasonable cost of the physical medium you are using to carry out the distribution. As long as you honor the terms in this license, you can sell copies of the software. You must make sure that they receive the same library. You must make sure that they receive the same library. You must make sure that they receive the same library.

The Library.

We call this license the "Lesser" General Public License because it does not restrict the user's freedom to release the software under a public license. It also provides other free software developers with a framework for creating their own public licenses for their libraries. However, the Lesser License provides advantages in certain special circumstances.

For example, in rare occasions, there may be a special need to encourage the widest possible use of a certain library, so that it becomes a de facto standard. To address this, non-free programs must be allowed to use the library. A user freedom issue is that if free users, there is little to gain by linking the free library to free software only, as we use the Lesser General Public License.

In other cases, permission to use a particular library in non-free programs may be needed in order to use the library. For example, the GNU C Library (glibc) provides a framework for creating their own public licenses for their libraries. However, the Lesser License provides advantages in certain special circumstances.

Although the Lesser General Public License is less restrictive of the user's freedom, it does ensure that the user of a program that is linked with the library has the freedom and the technical ability to re-link that program with a modified version of the library.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow. For those programs that are distributed under a "work based on the library" and a "work that uses the library", the terms contain some details from the library, whereas the latter must be combined with the library in order to run.

THE LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License Agreement applies to any software library or other program which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder or other party that the program is licensed under this License. Each license is addressed as "you".

A "library" means a collection of software functions and/or data organized as an object file or as a collection of linked object files.

The "library", below, refers to any software library or work which is licensed under this License. The "library" means either the library or any derivative work under a patent or copyright license that is subordinate to the library's copyright or patent license. Hereafter, translation is included without limitation in the term "modification".

"Source code" for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. For a library, this includes the source code, all the source code for all modules it contains, plus any associated interface definition files, plus the scripts used to control compilation and installation of the library.

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not restricted by this license: they are limited only to the extent that copying a program using the library is not restricted, and output from such a program is covered only if it contains derivative work based on the library (understanding of the use of the library in a host program is not required). However, that in no event shall the library be subject to patent or trademark claims by its contributors or licensors.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the library's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided you keep intact all the notices that refer to this license and to the absence of any warranty; you must also distribute a copy of this license along with the library.

You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set your own price for subsequent transfers to subsequent recipients.

2. You may modify your copy or copies of the library or any portion of it, then forming a work based on the library, and copy and distribute such modifications or your work under the terms of section 1 above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) The modified work must itself be a software library.

b) You must cause the files modified to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

c) You must cause the whole of the work to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

d) If a facility in the modified library refers to a function or a variable name that is defined in a header file that is not a part of the library, you must make a good faith effort to modify the facility so that it can still be used in the same manner as in the original library header file. You may, of course, use the "GNU" or "Free Software" designations to refer to the library, provided that you also meet all of these conditions.

(For example, a function in a library to compute square roots may be named "sqrt", but a header file that defines a macro "sqrt" must not compute square roots.)

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If you modify the library and then use the modified library in a program, you are not required to cause the program to be licensed under this License, but you must still comply with the conditions of section 1.

3. You may copy and distribute copies of the library's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided you keep intact all the notices that refer to this license and to the absence of any warranty; you must also distribute a copy of this license along with the library.

You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set your own price for subsequent transfers to subsequent recipients.

4. You may modify your copy or copies of the library or any portion of it, then forming a work based on the library, and copy and distribute such modifications or your work under the terms of section 1 above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) The modified work must itself be a software library.

b) You must cause the files modified to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

c) You must cause the whole of the work to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

You may, of course, use the "GNU" or "Free Software" designations to refer to the library, provided that you also meet all of these conditions.

(For example, a function in a library to compute square roots may be named "sqrt", but a header file that defines a macro "sqrt" must not compute square roots.)

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If you modify the library and then use the modified library in a program, you are not required to cause the program to be licensed under this License, but you must still comply with the conditions of section 1.

5. You may copy and distribute copies of the library's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided you keep intact all the notices that refer to this license and to the absence of any warranty; you must also distribute a copy of this license along with the library.

You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set your own price for subsequent transfers to subsequent recipients.

6. You may modify your copy or copies of the library or any portion of it, then forming a work based on the library, and copy and distribute such modifications or your work under the terms of section 1 above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

7. You may copy and distribute copies of the library's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided you keep intact all the notices that refer to this license and to the absence of any warranty; you must also distribute a copy of this license along with the library.

You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set your own price for subsequent transfers to subsequent recipients.

9. You may copy and distribute copies of the library's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided you keep intact all the notices that refer to this license and to the absence of any warranty; you must also distribute a copy of this license along with the library.

You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set your own price for subsequent transfers to subsequent recipients.

10. You may modify your copy or copies of the library or any portion of it, then forming a work based on the library, and copy and distribute such modifications or your work under the terms of section 1 above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) The modified work must itself be a software library.

b) You must cause the files modified to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

c) You must cause the whole of the work to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

d) If a facility in the modified library refers to a function or a variable name that is defined in a header file that is not a part of the library, you must make a good faith effort to modify the facility so that it can still be used in the same manner as in the original library header file. You may, of course, use the "GNU" or "Free Software" designations to refer to the library, provided that you also meet all of these conditions.

(For example, a function in a library to compute square roots may be named "sqrt", but a header file that defines a macro "sqrt" must not compute square roots.)

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If you modify the library and then use the modified library in a program, you are not required to cause the program to be licensed under this License, but you must still comply with the conditions of section 1.

11. You may copy and distribute copies of the library's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided you keep intact all the notices that refer to this license and to the absence of any warranty; you must also distribute a copy of this license along with the library.

You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set your own price for subsequent transfers to subsequent recipients.

12. You may modify your copy or copies of the library or any portion of it, then forming a work based on the library, and copy and distribute such modifications or your work under the terms of section 1 above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) The modified work must itself be a software library.

b) You must cause the files modified to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

c) You must cause the whole of the work to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this License.

d) If a facility in the modified library refers to a function or a variable name that is defined in a header file that is not a part of the library, you must make a good faith effort to modify the facility so that it can still be used in the same manner as in the original library header file. You may, of course, use the "GNU" or "Free Software" designations to refer to the library, provided that you also meet all of these conditions.

(For example, a function in a library to compute square roots may be named "sqrt", but a header file that defines a macro "sqrt" must not compute square roots.)

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If you modify the library and then use the modified library in a program, you are not required to cause the program to be licensed under this License, but you must still comply with the conditions of section 1.

13. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the Lesser General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be similar in spirit to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

Each version is given a distinctive version number. If the library has a version number of this license which applies to it and you are using a later version, you have the option of following the terms and conditions of that version or of any later version published by the Free Software Foundation; you may choose any version over published by the Free Software Foundation.

IN NO EVENT SHALL THE COPYRIGHT HOLDER OR ANY OTHER PARTY WHO MAY MODIFY AND/OR REPLICATE MATERIALS THAT ARE REDISTRIBUTED BY THIS LIBRARY BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR DAMAGES, INCLUDING ANY GENERAL, SPECIAL, INCIDENTAL, OR CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES ARISING OUT OF THE USE OR THE INABILITY TO USE THE PROGRAM (INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO THE LOSS OF DATA OR DATA BEING RENDERED INACCURATE OR LOSING THE ABILITY TO USE THE PROGRAM), EVEN IF SUCH HOLDER OR OTHER PARTY HAS BEEN ADVISED OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGES.

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Programs

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be under the same public license as the previous one, it is important to protect the public and to make sure that you do not have any restrictions under terms that are incompatible with the public license. If you develop a new program, you should always include a notice in your source code that says:

Copyright (c) YEAR the name of the copyright holder. All rights reserved. This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU Lesser General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation; either version 2.1 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This license is distributed in the hope that it will be useful. See the General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU Lesser General Public License along with this library; if not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 51 Franklin St, Fifth Floor, Boston, MA 02110-1301 USA

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

You should also get your employer (if you work as a programmer) or your school, if any, to sign a "copyright disclaimer" for the library, if necessary. Here is a sample; alter the names:

Richard Stallman. I hereby disclaim all copyright interests in the library, free (a library for fun-loving hackers) written by James Hanson-Wester.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
Version 2, June 1991

Copyright (C) 1989, 1991 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
51 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 01103 USA
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you give freedom to others and to yourself. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to use and distribute copies of free software to others as well as to yourself. You can do this in any way that you wish as long as you follow the same basic rules which regulate the rights of the copyright holder. These rules are designed to make sure you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for this service if you wish), that you receive source code or can get it if you want it, that you can change the software or make changes if it does not suit you, and that you can make copies for others to do the same.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid others to act in ways that would negate your freedom and the rights of other users to copy, distribute and modify the software. Your restrictions must be designed to make sure you are not imposing any new restrictions that would limit the rights of other users. For example, if you distribute or offer public access to software, you must make sure you do not put any conditions or restrictions on the recipients of the software that are more restrictive than the conditions in this license. For example, if you distribute or offer public access to software, you must not take away the recipients of the software the right to share. The exact code words that you use to make the license work are up to you, but you must use the same code words that are in this license. And you must show those terms so they know their rights.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this license which gives you the freedom to copy, distribute and modify the software.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that our contributions cannot be used to deny you the right to copy and distribute copies of your version of the software.

Finally, our Free Software is licensed to you as free software: you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License. In order to prevent this, we have taken certain steps to ensure that our contributions cannot be used to deny you the right to copy and distribute copies of your version of the software.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This license applies to any program or other work which contains a notice in its source code that it is licensed under the terms of this license. This notice is the "Program" referred to in the following paragraphs. It is a work which is licensed under this license. It is a work which is licensed under this license. It is a work which is licensed under this license.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you receive it, in any medium, provided that you comply with the following conditions:

a) You must retain in all copies of the Program any copyright notices that appear in the source code, and you must retain a copy of this license with each copy of the Program.

b) You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may set a price for your distribution of the Program in exchange for a fee.

2. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program or any portion of it, to suit your needs and to improve the Program, and you may distribute and/or make those modifications available to others. You must make the modified files in every program notice stating that you have changed the files and the date of any change.

a) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part contains or is derived from the Program or any part thereof, to be licensed as a whole to all third parties under the terms of this license.

b) If the modified program normally reads commands interactively when run, you must cause it, when it starts running, to print, or display an announcement including an appropriate copyright notice and a notice that you and/or your licensee have accepted the responsibility for any changes you made to the work. This announcement must appear whenever the program starts, and it must appear whenever the program is run in an interactive mode. It must not be a part of any documentation that comes with the program.

c) You may not use the modified program to propagate copies of copyrighted material or otherwise to engage in promotional activities on behalf of any copyrighted entity.

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If identifiable sections of that work are not derived from the Program, and can be reasonably considered independent and separate works in themselves, then this license, and its terms, do not apply to those sections. However, if you distribute the modified work, you must still comply with the distribution requirements in section 1.

3. You may copy and distribute the Program (or a work based on it, under Section 2) as object code or executable form under the terms of section 1 and 2 above provided that you also do one of the following:

a) Accompany it with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, which must be distributed under the terms of section 1, and a document giving access to the complete source code, or

b) Accompany it with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to provide all the source code for the program, either on a physical medium, or electronically, at a price no more than the cost of distributing a complete machine-readable copy of the corresponding machine code, to be distributed under the terms of section 1 and 2 above in a medium customary used for software interchange, or

c) Accompany it with the information you received as to the offer to distribute the complete source code. This offer must be a written offer, valid for at least three years, to provide all the source code for the program, either on a physical medium, or electronically, at a price no more than the cost of distributing a complete machine-readable copy of the corresponding machine code, to be distributed under the terms of section 1 and 2 above in a medium customary used for software interchange, or

4. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program except as expressly provided for in this license. Any other attempt to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program is void, and will automatically terminate your rights under this license. However, parties who have received copies of the program from you, and you have not received copies of the program from them, may continue to use the program under the terms of the license you received from your licensors.

5. You are not required to accept this license, since you have not signed it. However, nothing else grants you permission to modify or distribute the Program or its derivative works. Those actions are prohibited by law if you do not accept this license. Therefore, by modifying or distributing the Program (or any work based on the Program), you implicitly accept the terms of this license to do so, and all its terms and conditions as modified by the GNU General Public License.

6. Each time you redistribute the Program for any work based on the Program, the recipient automatically receives a license from the original licensor to copy, modify, and distribute the Program subject to these restrictions on the recipients' exercise of the rights granted herein. You are not responsible for enforcing compliance by third parties to this license.

7. If, as a consequence of a court judgment or allegation of patent infringement you are made by you or by a third party, to accept any terms or conditions for the redistribution of the Program, your obligations under this license are not affected.

8. If the distribution and/or use of the Program is restricted by copyright or patent law, you may distribute the Program under the terms of this license only in those jurisdictions where such restriction does not apply.

9. You may not charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may not charge a fee for your distribution of the Program in exchange for a fee.

10. If you distribute the Program (or a work based on it, under Section 2) as object code or executable form under the terms of section 1 and 2 above provided that you also do one of the following:

a) Accompany it with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, which must be distributed under the terms of section 1, and a document giving access to the complete source code, or

b) Accompany it with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to provide all the source code for the program, either on a physical medium, or electronically, at a price no more than the cost of distributing a complete machine-readable copy of the corresponding machine code, to be distributed under the terms of section 1 and 2 above in a medium customary used for software interchange, or

c) Accompany it with the information you received as to the offer to distribute the complete source code. This offer must be a written offer, valid for at least three years, to provide all the source code for the program, either on a physical medium, or electronically, at a price no more than the cost of distributing a complete machine-readable copy of the corresponding machine code, to be distributed under the terms of section 1 and 2 above in a medium customary used for software interchange, or

11. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program except as expressly provided for in this license. Any other attempt to copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program is void, and will automatically terminate your rights under this license. However, parties who have received copies of the program from you, and you have not received copies of the program from them, may continue to use the program under the terms of the license you received from your licensors.

12. If you distribute the Program (or a work based on it, under Section 2) as object code or executable form under the terms of section 1 and 2 above provided that you also do one of the following:

a) Accompany it with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, which must be distributed under the terms of section 1, and a document giving access to the complete source code, or

b) Accompany it with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to provide all the source code for the program, either on a physical medium, or electronically, at a price no more than the cost of distributing a complete machine-readable copy of the corresponding machine code, to be distributed under the terms of section 1 and 2 above in a medium customary used for software interchange, or

c) Accompany it with the information you received as to the offer to distribute the complete source code. This offer must be a written offer, valid for at least three years, to provide all the source code for the program, either on a physical medium, or electronically, at a price no more than the cost of distributing a complete machine-readable copy of the corresponding machine code, to be distributed under the terms of section 1 and 2 above in a medium customary used for software interchange, or

13. You may not charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may not charge a fee for your distribution of the Program in exchange for a fee.

15. BECAUSE THE PROGRAM IS LICENSED FREE OF CHARGE, THERE IS NO WARRANTY FOR THE PROGRAM. THE ENTIRE RISK AS TO THE QUALITY AND QUANTITY OF THE PROGRAM IS WITH YOU. THE PROGRAM IS PROVIDED WITHOUT WARRANTY OF ANY KIND, INCLUDING MERCHANTABILITY AND FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. YOU ASSUME THE COST OF ALL NECESSARY SERVICING, REPAIR OR CORRECTION.

16. IN NO EVENT SHALL THE COPYRIGHT HOLDER OR ANY OTHER PARTY WHO MAY MODIFY AND/OR REPLICATE MATERIALS THAT ARE REDISTRIBUTED BY THIS LIBRARY BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR DAMAGES, INCLUDING ANY GENERAL, SPECIAL, INCIDENTAL, OR CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES ARISING OUT OF THE USE OR THE INABILITY TO USE THE PROGRAM (INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO THE LOSS OF DATA OR DATA BEING RENDERED INACCURATE OR LOSING THE ABILITY TO USE THE PROGRAM), EVEN IF SUCH HOLDER OR OTHER PARTY HAS BEEN ADVISED OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGES.

How to Apply These Terms to Your Program

If you develop a new program, and you want to use the present license as the basis for the license, the best way to achieve this is to make it free software which carries the redistribution and change above these terms.

To do so, attach the following notices to the program. If it is not feasible to do so, place the notices in a separate file that accompanies the program. Each notice should refer to the "copyright" line and a pointer to where the full notice is found.

One line to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does. Copyright (C) year name of author. This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation; either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version. This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should also get your neighbor (if you work as a programmer) or your secretary, to sign a "copyright disclaimer" for the program, if necessary. Here is a sample of the desired disclaimer: "I, name, do hereby disclaim all copyright interest in the program 'Computer' (with name and compiler) written by James Hacker. Copyright of Dr. Com. 3 April 1989. By Don, President of Visa.

The GNU General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary programs. If your program is a sublibrary of a proprietary program, you may consider it more useful to permit linking proprietary applications with the library. If this is what you want to do, use the GNU Library General Public License instead of this License.

Appendix B.1.1

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 2, 20 June 2002 Copyright (C) 2002 Free Software Foundation, Inc. http://www.gnu.org/copyleft/gpl.html This license is intended to be used in the same manner as the license of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Freedom The GNU General Public License is a free, copyleft license for software and other kinds of works.

The license for most software and other practical works are designed to allow you to share and improve your work by redistributing and/or modifying it. However, for most software, the copyright holder also wishes to make sure that you receive source code of any copies you receive that you have not already received, so that you can change the code to suit your local circumstances. The GNU General Public License for software allows you to do this, provided you follow the license's requirements for redistributing and/or modifying it.

When you speak of free software, you are referring to freedom, not price. Our definition of free software is more restrictive than you may think. It covers technical librar...

To protect your rights, we need to prevent others from denying you the right to receive copies of your program's source code. Therefore, the GNU General Public License is designed to make sure that you receive source code of any copies you receive that you have not already received, so that you can change the code to suit your local circumstances.

For example, if you distribute copies of a program, whether printed or in electronic form, you must make sure that you also give away a copy of the source code. And you must make sure that you also give away a copy of the source code.

Developers that use the GNU GPL protect your rights with two steps: (1) assert copyright on the software, and (2) offer you this License, giving you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify it.

For the developer's and author's protection, the GPL clearly explains that there is no warranty for the software's performance. In addition, we demand that any author must provide copies of the source code, and that their problem will not be attributed erroneously to authors of previous versions.

Some decisions are designed to deny access to install or run modified versions of the software in the future. Although the GNU General Public License is designed to be compatible with the open source licensing model, it is not intended to be used for software that is not intended to be distributed. For example, it is not intended to be used for software that is not intended to be distributed.

Finally, every program is threatened constantly by software patents. Our license is designed to resist this kind of threat by making it clear that any patent holder who wishes to make use of a program must take into account the GNU General Public License's requirements for redistributing and/or modifying it.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

0. Definitions. "This License" refers to version 2 of the GNU General Public License. "Copyright" also means copyright-like laws that apply to other kinds of works, such as semiconductor masks.

"The Program" refers to any copyrightable work licensed under this License. Each licensee is addressed as "you". "Licensees" and "recipients" are defined in section 1.

"To modify" a work means to copy from or adapt all or part of the work in a way that creates a new work. A modified version must carry a new, prominent line in the list meets this criterion.

1. Source Code. The "source code" for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. "Object code" means any non-source form of a work.

A "covered work" means any derivative work, whether based on an official standard defined by a recognized standards body, or in the case of software, specified for a particular programming language, and that is widely used among developers working in that language.

The "System Libraries" of an executable work include modules, other than the work as a whole, that are included in the normal form of packaging a major component, in which case only that major component is subject to the requirements of this License. For other systems, the license for a particular component may apply to that component.

The "Corresponding Source" for a work in object code form means all the source code needed to generate, install, and run the object code on the target host, and to modify the work, including scripts and configuration files, and any data files, such as tables, templates, and text files, that are necessary to run the work on the target host, and to modify the work, including scripts and configuration files, and any data files, such as tables, templates, and text files, that are necessary to run the work on the target host.

The Corresponding Source need not include anything that users can regenerate automatically from other parts of the Corresponding Source. The Corresponding Source for a work in source code form is that same work.

2. Basic Permission. All rights granted under this License are granted for the term of copyright in the Program, and are irrevocable and exclusive to the licensee of the work. This license grants you the right to copy, distribute and/or modify the work, provided you follow the license's requirements for redistributing and/or modifying it.

You may copy, run and propagate covered works that you do not modify, without conditions or restrictions, without charge, and without recording your name, provided you preserve all copyright notices in, or accompany the work with, the source code. You may copy, run and propagate covered works that you do not modify, without conditions or restrictions, without charge, and without recording your name, provided you preserve all copyright notices in, or accompany the work with, the source code.

You may copy, run and propagate covered works that you do not modify, without conditions or restrictions, without charge, and without recording your name, provided you preserve all copyright notices in, or accompany the work with, the source code. You may copy, run and propagate covered works that you do not modify, without conditions or restrictions, without charge, and without recording your name, provided you preserve all copyright notices in, or accompany the work with, the source code.

3. Protecting Users' Legal Rights From Anti-Circumvention Law. No covered work shall be deemed part of an effective technological measure under applicable law that restricts right to run copies of the work, provided that you do not circumvent the measure.

When you convey a covered work, you must also convey a copy of any corresponding source code for that work, either in the form of a printed volume or in a machine-readable form, provided that you take reasonable steps to ensure that the recipient can access the source code. You may charge a separate fee for your conveying a separate document carrying the source code for that work, but you must at least convey the source code for that work, either in the form of a printed volume or in a machine-readable form.

4. Conveying Modified Source Codes. You may convey a work based on the Program, or the modifications to it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and conspicuously display in each copy an appropriate copyright notice, and that you take reasonable steps to ensure that the recipient can access the source code. You may charge a separate fee for your conveying a separate document carrying the source code for that work, but you must at least convey the source code for that work, either in the form of a printed volume or in a machine-readable form.

5. Conveying Non-Source Forms. You may convey a work based on the Program, or the modifications to it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and conspicuously display in each copy an appropriate copyright notice, and that you take reasonable steps to ensure that the recipient can access the source code. You may charge a separate fee for your conveying a separate document carrying the source code for that work, but you must at least convey the source code for that work, either in the form of a printed volume or in a machine-readable form.

6. Conveying Source Forms. You may convey a work based on the Program, or the modifications to it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and conspicuously display in each copy an appropriate copyright notice, and that you take reasonable steps to ensure that the recipient can access the source code. You may charge a separate fee for your conveying a separate document carrying the source code for that work, but you must at least convey the source code for that work, either in the form of a printed volume or in a machine-readable form.

7. Conveying Source Forms. You may convey a work based on the Program, or the modifications to it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and conspicuously display in each copy an appropriate copyright notice, and that you take reasonable steps to ensure that the recipient can access the source code. You may charge a separate fee for your conveying a separate document carrying the source code for that work, but you must at least convey the source code for that work, either in the form of a printed volume or in a machine-readable form.

8. Conveying Source Forms. You may convey a work based on the Program, or the modifications to it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and conspicuously display in each copy an appropriate copyright notice, and that you take reasonable steps to ensure that the recipient can access the source code. You may charge a separate fee for your conveying a separate document carrying the source code for that work, but you must at least convey the source code for that work, either in the form of a printed volume or in a machine-readable form.

9. Conveying Source Forms. You may convey a work based on the Program, or the modifications to it, in any medium, provided that you prominently and conspicuously display in each copy an appropriate copyright notice, and that you take reasonable steps to ensure that the recipient can access the source code. available for as long as needed to satisfy these requirements.

e) Copy the object code using peer-to-peer transmission, provided that other users whose object code and corresponding source code are being offered to the general public at no charge under section 2d.

A separate portion of the object code, whose source code is excluded from the corresponding source by a license library, may be included in conveying the object code work.

A "user product" is either (1) a "consumer product", which means any tangible personal property which is normally used by a person, family, or household, or (2) anything designed or sold for incorporation into a tangible personal property. For purposes of this section, whether repair or replacement parts are required to be available for repair or replacement parts shall be determined in favor of coverage. For a particular product received by a particular user, "distribute" means to distribute the object code from the particular user or to the extent to which the particular user is a consumer product recipient of another product has distributed the object code from the particular user, unless such user represents the only significant mode of use of the product.

"Installation Information" for a User Product means any methods, procedures, authorization keys, or other information required to install and execute modified versions of a covered work in that User Product from a modified version of its Corresponding Source. The information must be placed in the User Product and it must not, for any reason, be removed or altered in its case presented or interfered with easily because modification has been made.

If you convey an object code work under this section in, or with, or specifically for use in, a User Product, and the conveyance occurs as part of a transaction in which the right of possession and use of the User Product is transferred by the recipient in perpetuity or for a fixed term of longer than three years, and you receive payment for the Corresponding Source covered under this section, you must also accompany the Corresponding Source with the Installation Information. This requirement does not apply if either you or the third party to whom you are conveying the object code work has already provided you with the Installation Information. In this case, you may place the Installation Information on the User Product for example, the work has been installed on the User Product.

The requirement to provide Installation Information does not include a requirement to provide support services, warranty, or other services for the work that has been modified or installed by the recipient, or for the user product in which it has been modified or installed. However, if you convey a copy of the work, you must accompany it with the Installation Information, unless you already accompany it with the Installation Information in another manner. It is not allowed to restrict the recipient's ability to use and redistribute the material just received from you, and you must not prohibit the recipient from conveying the material.

Corresponding Source covered under this section must be accompanied by the Corresponding Source for the work, which may be in separate physical or digital form, and must require no special password or key for access, opening or copying.

7. Additional Terms.

"Additional permissions" are terms that supplement the terms of this License by making exceptions to one or more of its conditions. Additional permissions that are required by the recipient must be included in this license in the form of a notice that describes the additional permissions in such a way that the recipient is clearly advised of what they are. This license may incorporate the terms of another license, by reference, in order to allow a license to cover all its uses, but it cannot do so by reference only. In order to be effective, you must make the appropriate legal notices and statements of disclaimer visible to the recipient of the material in the form you distribute it.

When you convey a copy of a covered work, you may at your option include additional permissions from this section, provided that you license those permissions on the same basis and under the same legal notices and disclaimers as the permissions for the work. You may place additional permissions on material, added by you to a covered work, for which you have or can give appropriate copyright permission.

Notwithstanding any other provision in this License, for material which is licensed under this License, you may include the text "Copyright © 2009 Free Software Foundation, Inc." in the material without changing the terms of this license.

executable containing the modified library. It is understood that the user who changes the contents of modifications files in the library will not be restricted in any way to reexecute the application on the modified executable.

- 1) Use a suitable shared library mechanism for linking with the library. A suitable mechanism is one where the user can use a copy of the library already present on the user's computer system, rather than copying the library into the executable, and (2) the user installable all copies of the modified executables. It is therefore recommended that you include a script that can automatically install the modified executables with the same user who can use them.
- 2) Accompany the work with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to give the same user the material specified in Subsection 8b, above, for a charge no more than the cost of performing this distribution.
- 3) If distribution of the work is made by offering access to copy the work on a designated place, offer equivalent access to copy the above material from the same place.
- 4) Verify that you have already received a copy of the material of that you have already sent this user a copy.

For an executable, the preferred form of the form that uses the library must include any data and utility programs needed for reexecuting the executable from scratch. However, as a special exception, the material may be distributed in object code form provided that the material is distributed in either source or binary form with the major components, source, and all of the operating system files which the executable runs, unless that component itself accompanies the executable.

It may happen that this requirement conflicts the license of a component of other programs. If you can cause that component to use both the library and the library together in an executable that you distribute.

7. You may place library facilities that are a work based on the library in a combined library or other software package. The facilities not covered by this license must be distributed in a combined library, provided that the separate distribution of the work based on the library and the other library facilities is otherwise permitted, and provided that you do these two things:
 - a) Accompany the combined library with a copy of the same work based on the library, accompanied with any other library facilities. This must be distributed under the terms of the section above.
 - b) Give prominent notice with the combined library of the fact that the work is a work based on the library, and mentioning where to find the accompanying uncombined form of the same work.

8. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, link with, or distribute the material except as expressly provided under this license. Any attempt to copy, modify, sublicense, link with, or distribute the material in any way not permitted by this license is prohibited, and you will automatically terminate your rights if you do this. You may not remove any copyright notices for any material from this license. If you do, your license terminates in all cases and will apply to the copies that you have made of that material and to any copies that you then make.

9. You may not remove any copyright notices for any material from this license. If you do, your license terminates in all cases and will apply to the copies that you have made of that material and to any copies that you then make.

10. Each time you redistribute the library (or any work based on the library), you must prominently display the following notice on the material that is distributed. This notice must be placed in the same form and location as the original copyright notice. This notice must be placed in the same form and location as the original copyright notice. Bitstream License

September 18, 2015

The Bitstream Library and declared programs are provided under the terms of the GNU General Public License version 3 (GPLv3)

1. Static linking of applications to the Bitstream Library is not considered a derivative work and does not require the author to provide source code for the application, use the shared Bitstream Libraries, or link their applications against a user-supplied version of Bitstream.

If you link the application to a modified version of Bitstream then the changes to Bitstream must be provided under the terms of the GPLv3 in sections 2, 3, and 4.

2. You do not have to provide a copy of the Bitstream Library with programs that are linked to the Bitstream Library, nor do you have to provide a copy of the Bitstream Library with programs or documentation as required by section 6 of the GPLv3.

GNU LIBRARY GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 3, June 2007

Copyright (C) 2007 Free Software Foundation, Inc.

59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA

Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

[This is the first released version of the library GPL. It is numbered 2 because it goes with version 2 of the ordinary GPL.]

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change the software. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software: to make sure the software is free for all users.

This license, the GNU General Public License, applies to some free programs whose authors decide to use it. You can use it for your programs too.

When you speak of free software, you are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of freely licensed programs; to change the programs to suit your computing environment; to redistribute copies of the programs you have changed; and to improve the programs by publishing your changes. The licenses also grant you permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the library.

For example, if you distribute copies of the library, whether gratis or for a fee, you must also distribute to each recipient a copy of the library under the same license that you received it under. If you link a program with the library, you must ensure that the program is covered by the same license as the library, or that you have the right to distribute copies of the library and the program together under a license that grants you permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the library.

Also, for each derivative program, you must make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this free library. If the library is used by someone who is not licensed under the GPLv3, we do not intend to be held responsible for any problems caused by others who are not licensed under the GPLv3.

Finally, our free programs are licensed consistently by software authors: we wish to avoid the trap of companies distributing free software with individually obscure licenses. This is an effort to encourage the development of free software, to avoid the confusion of the software user, and to avoid the confusion of the software user.

Most GNU software, including some libraries, is covered by the ordinary GNU General Public License, which was designed for utility programs. This license, the GNU Library General Public License, is intended to cover software that is used to build other programs, or that is used to build other software.

The reason we have a separate public license for some libraries is that they often have a special relationship to the software they are used to build. For example, a program and library which are linked together but are not themselves linked together, or a program and library which are linked together but are not themselves linked together.

Because of this special relationship, using the ordinary General Public License for libraries does not sufficiently protect software authors. Therefore, we have created this license, the GNU Library General Public License. This license is intended to cover software that is used to build other programs, or that is used to build other software.

However, unrestricted linking of non-free programs would deprive software authors of their ability to distribute their software. Therefore, we have created this license, the GNU Library General Public License, which is intended to cover software that is used to build other programs, or that is used to build other software.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow. Pay close attention to the difference between a program and a library, and to the difference between a program and a library. Some authors use the word "library" to refer to a program, while the latter only works together with the library.

Note that it is possible for a library to be covered by the ordinary GNU General Public License rather than by this special one.

GNU LIBRARY GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This license Agreement applies to any software library which contains a notice stating that the copyright holder grants you permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the library under the terms of this license. Each licensee is addressed as "you".

A library's name consists of software functions and/or data

You should also get your employer (if you work as a programmer) or your school, if any, to sign a "copyright disclaimer" for the library, if necessary. Here is a sample after the name:

Yodanis, Inc., hereby disclaims all copyright interests in the library, from its Library for Teaching Robots written by James Hanson Bucker.

Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you remain free of restrictions. To protect the rights of those who write software, the Free Software Foundation has developed this license. This license is intended to make sure the software is free for all its users. This license is intended to make sure the software is free for all its users. This license is intended to make sure the software is free for all its users. This license is intended to make sure the software is free for all its users.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software and charge for them. You may charge for distribution of the software. You may charge for support for the software. You may charge for warranty for the software. You may charge for any other service you offer for the software. You may charge for any other service you offer for the software.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid anyone to deny you these rights or to ask you to surrender the rights. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the software, or if you modify it.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive or can get the source code. You must make sure that they, too, know their rights.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this license which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this free software. If the software is modified by someone else and used in a way not intended by its creator, we do not want to be responsible for any problems introduced by others who will not reflect on the original author's reputation.

Finally, any free program is threatened constantly by software patents. We wish to avoid the danger that restrictions of a free program will be used to prevent the program from being free. We wish to avoid the danger that restrictions of a free program will be used to prevent the program from being free.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This license applies to any program or other work which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder stating that it may be distributed under the terms of this General Public License. The Program is a copy or a derivative work of the original work. The Program is a copy or a derivative work of the original work. The Program is a copy or a derivative work of the original work.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you find it, provided that you copy, distribute and/or modify the program, you must first copy and distribute to each recipient all applicable portions of this license and the disclaimer of warranty. You must also include a copy of this license and the disclaimer of warranty with each copy of the program.

2. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option offer warranty protection in exchange for a fee.

3. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program and/or portions of it, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) You must cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

b) You must cause any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part contains or is derived from the Program or any part thereof, to be licensed under the same terms of this license as the Program and to include under the same title at least the same notice as appears in the Program.

c) If the modified program normally reads commands interactively at the user's prompt, you must cause the starting screen to display an acknowledgment including the copyright notice and a notice that there is no warranty. If the program normally does not read commands interactively, you must cause it to display a notice that there is no warranty. If the program normally does not read commands interactively, you must cause it to display a notice that there is no warranty.

4. You may copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program as you wish, provided that you first copy and distribute to each recipient all applicable portions of this license and the disclaimer of warranty. You must also include a copy of this license and the disclaimer of warranty with each copy of the program.

5. You are not required to grant this license to anyone who receives a copy of the program from you, either directly or indirectly, unless you explicitly make such a promise to the person to whom you made the promise.

6. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), you must also make available to anyone receiving the program a copy of the corresponding source code. The source code must be distributed under the same license and under the same terms of this license as the object code.

7. If you distribute the Program or any work based on the Program, you must also make available to anyone receiving the program a copy of the corresponding source code. The source code must be distributed under the same license and under the same terms of this license as the object code.

8. If you distribute the Program or any work based on the Program, you must also make available to anyone receiving the program a copy of the corresponding source code. The source code must be distributed under the same license and under the same terms of this license as the object code.

9. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be similar in spirit to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

10. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs, you may do so by writing specific exemption to the Free Software Foundation. You may do so by writing specific exemption to the Free Software Foundation. You may do so by writing specific exemption to the Free Software Foundation.

11. BECAUSE THE PROGRAM IS LICENSED FREE OF CHARGE, THERE IS NO WARRANTY FOR THE PROGRAM. THE ENTIRE RISK AS TO THE QUALITY OF THE PROGRAM IS WITH YOU. SHOULD THE PROGRAM PROVE DEFECTIVE, YOU ASSUME THE COST OF ALL NECESSARY SERVICING, REPAIR OR CORRECTION.

12. IN NO EVENT UNLESS REQUIRED BY APPLICABLE LAW OR AGREED TO IN WRITING WILL ANY COPYRIGHT HOLDER, OR ANY OTHER PARTY WHO MAY MODIFY AND/OR REDISTRIBUTE THE PROGRAM AS AUTHORIZED HEREIN, BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR DAMAGES, INCLUDING ANY GENERAL, SPECIAL, INCIDENTAL, OR CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES, WHETHER IN A CONTRACT OR IN TORT OR IN EQUITY.

END OF TERMS AND CONDITIONS

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Program

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be of the greatest possible use to the public, the best way to achieve this is to make it free software which everyone can redistribute and change under these terms.

To do so, attach the following notices to the program. If you have already written the program, you should clearly mark where these notices should be put. We have added the letters "G" to indicate where you should put the text of each notice in most effectively. We have added the letters "G" to indicate where you should put the text of each notice in most effectively.

13. This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation, either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

14. This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program. If not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, make it output a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode:

Copyright (C) 1989 by author.

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation, either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program. If not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA

This General Public License does not permit incorporating your program into proprietary programs. If your program is a subcomponent of a larger program, you must still adhere to this license for the subcomponent.

consider it more useful to permit linking proprietary applications with the library. If this is what you want to do, use the GNU Library General Public License instead of this license.

GNU LESSER GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
Version 2.1, February 1999

Copyright (C) 1991, 1999 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
51 Franklin Street, Fifth Floor, Boston, MA 02110-1301 USA
Everyone is permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document.

This is the first released version of the Lesser GPL. It also counts as the second version of the GNU Library General Public License, version 2, since the version number 2.1.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change any software you receive. To accomplish this, the GNU General Public License requires only that you provide further distribution of the program if you receive it under this license, and that you also make available to any other person who receives it a copy of this license document.

This license, the GNU Lesser General Public License, applies to some Free Software Foundation and other authors who decide to use it. The licenses for most other software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU Lesser General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change any software you receive. To accomplish this, the GNU Lesser General Public License requires only that you provide further distribution of the program if you receive it under this license, and that you also make available to any other person who receives it a copy of this license document.

When you share a program you receive under this license, you are permitted to do so in any way that you wish for yourself or for a third party. You are permitted to charge a fee for this service if you wish, but you must make source code available to any other person who receives it. If you wish, you may charge a fee for copying, distributing or providing support for this program. You are permitted to charge a fee for this service if you wish, but you must make source code available to any other person who receives it. If you wish, you may charge a fee for copying, distributing or providing support for this program.

To protect your rights, we have taken certain precautions to ensure that your rights will be preserved if your program is copied and distributed. These precautions include requiring that distributions you make must be made under the GNU Lesser General Public License, and that you must also make available to any other person who receives it a copy of this license document.

For example, if you distribute copies of the library, whether gratis or for a fee, you must give the recipients all the rights that we give you. You must also make sure that they receive the correct library files to use with the library, and that they receive the correct version of the library. You must also make sure that they receive the correct version of the library.

We protect your rights with a two-step method: (1) we copyright the library, and (2) we offer you this license, which gives you legal protection to copy, distribute and modify the library.

To protect your copyright, we want to make it very clear that there is no warranty for the library. Also, if the library is modified by someone else and you wish to distribute the modified version, you must make it clear that it is not the original version, so that the original author's name will not be affected by problems the distributor may introduce.

Finally, software patents pose a constant threat to the existence of any free program. We wish to make sure that a company cannot effectively restrict the users of a free program by obtaining a patents covering it. Therefore, we have decided to add a provision to the license that says that any patent covering the library must be licensed with the full freedom of use specified in this license.

Most GNU software, including some libraries, is covered by the GNU General Public License. This license, the GNU Lesser General Public License, is more liberal than the GNU General Public License. It is intended to be used for non-free libraries and programs. It is intended to be used for non-free libraries and programs. It is intended to be used for non-free libraries and programs.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared library, the combination of the two is legally speaking a combined work, a derivative work of the original library, and the GNU Lesser General Public License applies to it. However, the GNU Lesser General Public License is more liberal than the GNU General Public License, and it is intended to be used for non-free libraries and programs.

We call this license the "Lesser" General Public License because it does less to protect the user's freedom than the GNU General Public License. It also provides other Free Software Foundation programs for the reason we use the GNU General Public License for many libraries. However, the GNU Lesser General Public License is more liberal than the GNU General Public License, and it is intended to be used for non-free libraries and programs.

For example, on rare occasions, there may be a special need to encourage the widest possible use of certain libraries, so that they become de-facto standards. To achieve this, non-free programs may be allowed to use the library. However, the GNU Lesser General Public License is more liberal than the GNU General Public License, and it is intended to be used for non-free libraries and programs.

In other cases, permission to use a particular library in non-free programs may be useful. For example, permission to use the GNU C Library in non-free programs enables many more people to use the GNU operating system, as well as its variant, the GNU/Linux operating system.

Although the GNU Lesser General Public License is less protective of the users' freedom, it does ensure that the user of a program that is linked with the library has the benefit of the GNU Lesser General Public License. It is intended to be used for non-free libraries and programs.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow. Pay close attention to the differences between a license that says that you must distribute under the terms of this license and a license that says that you must distribute under the terms of the GNU General Public License. It is intended to be used for non-free libraries and programs.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License Agreement applies to any software library or other program which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder and you agree to accept the terms of this license document in order to receive a copy of the library or program, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

1. The library must be distributed under the terms of the GNU Lesser General Public License. It is intended to be used for non-free libraries and programs.

2. You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option offer warranty protection in exchange for a fee.

3. You may modify your copy or copies of the library or your portion of it to suit your particular system, provided that you modify it only for the purpose of debugging and testing, and provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) The modified work must itself be a software library.

b) You must cause the filename of the modified library to carry prominent notice stating that you changed the file and the date of any change.

c) You must cause the filename of the modified library to carry prominent notice stating that you changed the file and the date of any change.

4. If you modify the library, you must also make available to any other person who receives it a copy of this license document. It is intended to be used for non-free libraries and programs.

5. In addition, no aggregation of another work not based on the library with the library (or with a work based on the library) as a whole may be made available to other persons in the aggregate, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) The work must be distributed under the terms of the GNU Lesser General Public License. It is intended to be used for non-free libraries and programs.

b) You must cause the filename of the modified library to carry prominent notice stating that you changed the file and the date of any change.

c) You must cause the filename of the modified library to carry prominent notice stating that you changed the file and the date of any change.

d) If you distribute the work in a form that does not allow for modification or distribution by recipients, you must also make available to any other person who receives it a copy of this license document. It is intended to be used for non-free libraries and programs.

and can be reasonably considered independent and separate works in themselves, then this License, and all terms, do not apply to those sections when you distribute them as separate works. To whom you distribute them as separate works is your discretion; however, if you wish to apply this License to the distribution of the whole (but not to the terms of this License), you must include a separate copy of this License with each copy of the whole, and thus to each and every part regardless of who writes it.

This License is not intended to restrict what you can do with material that you have written originally by you; rather, the License is to restrict the rights to control the distribution of derivative or collective works based on the Library.

In addition, more aggregation of another work not based on the Library with the Library (or with a work based on the Library) as a volume or a collection of distributions makes sense and brings the other work under the terms of this License.

3. You may opt to apply the terms of the ordinary GNU General Public License instead of this License to a given copy of the Library. In that case, you must alter all the notices that refer to this License, so that they refer to the ordinary GNU General Public License, so that the license of a particular work of the Library is not affected by the choice of which license you apply. You can apply these notices:

How this change to the GNU GPL applies, it is irrelevant for that copy, as the ordinary GNU General Public License applies to all subsequent copies and derivative works made from that copy.

This option is useful when you wish to copy parts of the code of the Library into a program that is not a Library.

4. You may copy and distribute the Library (or a portion or derivative of it) under Section 3) in object code or executable form under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above provided that you accompany it with a complete corresponding machine-readable source code, which must be distributed under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above in a medium customarily used for software interchange.

If distribution of object code is made by offering access to the source code from the same place, facilities the requirements to copy and distribute the source code, even though three parties are not compelled to copy the source along with the object code.

5. A program that contains no derivative of any portion of the Library, but is designed to work with the Library by means of a call or interface with it, is not considered a derivative work of the Library. Such work, in particular, is not a derivative work of the Library, and therefore falls outside the terms of this License.

However, linking a "work that uses the Library" with the Library creates an executable that is a derivative of the Library (because it contains portions of the Library), rather than a "work that uses the library"; the executable is therefore covered by this License.

When a "work that uses the Library" uses material from a header file or other part of the Library, it is considered a "work that uses the Library" even though the source code is not. If the work is a library, it is considered a "work that uses the Library" if it is linked against the Library, or if the work is itself a library, the threshold for this to be true is not precisely defined by law.

If you object to this exception to the requirements for copying and distributing source code, you may wish to consider an alternative license for your library. Alternatively, you may wish to consider an alternative license for your library.

Moreover, if the work is a derivative of the Library, you may not make a separate collection for redistribution that includes only portions of the Library. You may make such a collection only if the collection is licensed under the terms of this License.

6. As an exception to the Sections above, you may also combine or link a "work that uses the Library" with the Library to produce a work containing portions of the Library, and distribute that work under terms of your choice not covered by this License. However, this option is available only if the contents of the work are engineering for debugging such modifications.

The work must be prominent in its own right. The work must be clearly identified as a derivative of the Library, and the work must be clearly identified as a derivative of the Library. The work must be clearly identified as a derivative of the Library. The work must be clearly identified as a derivative of the Library.

7. Accompany the work with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code for the Library including whatever changes were used in the work. You must also distribute under Sections 1 and 2 above any code that you have written for the work, with the complete machine-readable "work that uses the Library" object code and source code, so that the user can modify the Library and the work to create a modified version of the work that is not a derivative of the Library. The work must be clearly identified as a derivative of the Library, and the work must be clearly identified as a derivative of the Library.

8. If you create a modified version of the Library, you must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License.

9. If you create a modified version of the Library, you must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License.

10. If you create a modified version of the Library, you must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License.

11. If you create a modified version of the Library, you must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License.

12. If you create a modified version of the Library, you must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License.

13. If you create a modified version of the Library, you must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License.

14. If you create a modified version of the Library, you must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License.

15. If you create a modified version of the Library, you must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License. You must make it available under the terms of this License.

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Libraries

If you develop a new Library, and you wish to apply the terms of the present license to the public, we recommend making it free software that redistribution under these terms. You can do so by putting the following text in the source code of the Library (or, alternatively, under the terms of the ordinary GNU General Public License):

To apply these terms, attach the following notice to the Library. It is recommended to attach this to the start of each source file to make it clearly visible to users of the Library. You may also attach it to the "copyright" line and a pointer to where the full notice is found.

Some lines to give the library a name and a brief idea of what it does:

You should also get your publisher (if you work in a program) or your school, if you, to sign a "copyright disclaimer" for the library, if necessary. Here is a sample; alter the names:

GNU LIBRARY GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE
Version 2.0, February 1989

Copyright (C) 1989, 1999 Free Software Foundation, Inc.
This License is based on the GNU General Public License version 2.0. It is intended to be used for software that is not derived from the GNU General Public License version 2.0. It also counts as the successor of the GNU Library Public License version 2.0, hence the version number 2.1.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change the software. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software--to make sure the software is free for all its users.

This license, the Lesser General Public License, applies to some specially designated software packages--"libraries"--of the Free Software Foundation and other authors who decide to use it. You can use it too, but you might not want to--because it does not require you to open up all of your code, like the GNU General Public License does. It is designed to allow people to use a library without requiring the entire application to be open as well.

When you share a library you are not in the position of a distributor. You are simply helping to make the library available to other users. The GNU General Public License is designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and change it if you wish) if you do not charge for the software. This license, on the other hand, is designed to allow you to charge for a library you distribute.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid distributors to deny you these rights or to ask you to surrender these rights. Thus, if you distribute copies of the library, you must also make sure that you provide other users with the corresponding GNU General Public License. For example, if you distribute copies of the library, whether gratis or for a fee, you must also give the recipients all the rights that we gave you. You must make sure that they receive the GNU General Public License and you must show them how to obtain a copy of the GNU General Public License. You may do this by printing the license text along with the library, or by linking the library to a program and requiring that the user be given a copy of the GNU General Public License.

We protect your rights with a license that requires you to pass it to the recipients, and to make it available to them. If you do not pass it on, you must make it available to anyone who requests it. If you do not pass it on, you must make it available to anyone who requests it. If you do not pass it on, you must make it available to anyone who requests it.

Finally, software patents pose a constant threat to the existence of any free software. We wish to avoid patents being used as a means to restrict the freedom of others to use the software. We do not want to restrict the freedom of others to use the software. We do not want to restrict the freedom of others to use the software.

When a program is linked with a library, whether statically or using a shared library, the combination of the two is a single executable work. A derivative of the original library is the original library. A derivative of the original library is the original library. A derivative of the original library is the original library.

We call this license the "Lesser" General Public License because it is less restrictive than the GNU General Public License. It is less restrictive than the GNU General Public License. It is less restrictive than the GNU General Public License.

For example, on rare occasions, there may be a special need to restrict the sharing or the copying of a program. It is not always possible to do this. It is not always possible to do this. It is not always possible to do this.

Although the Lesser General Public License is less restrictive of the user's freedom, it does ensure that the user of a program that is linked with the library has the freedom to use the program that is linked with the library in order to run.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow. Pay close attention to the difference between a work based on the library and a work that uses the library. The terms and conditions are different. The terms and conditions are different.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License Agreement applies to any software library or other program which contains a notice placed by the copyright holder or other authorized party, stating that it is distributed under the terms of this Lesser General Public License (the "Library"). Each license is addressed as "code".

A "library" means a collection of software functions and/or data organized as a library, as is conventionally understood, and which are used as such in their own right or in connection with other programs.

The "library" below, refers to any such software library or work which is distributed under this license. A "work based on the library" means either the library or any derivative work under the copyright law, that is to say, a work containing the library or a portion of it, either verbatim or with modifications and/or translated into another language. In this license, the word "modification" includes "translation".

"Source code" for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. For a library, this includes the source code for all modules it contains, plus any associated header files, documentation, and other files which control compilation and installation of the library.

Activities other than copying, distribution and modification are not covered by this license. They are outside its scope. The act of copying a program from the library is not restricted, and is subject to the library's independent use of the library in a suit for patent infringement. It is not restricted, and is subject to the library's independent use of the library in a suit for patent infringement.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the library's source code, under the terms of this license, provided that you prominently and appropriately publish to each copy an appropriate copyright notice and disclaimer of warranty; keep intact all the notices that refer to this license and to the absence of any warranty; and distribute a copy of this license along with the code.

You may charge a fee for the physical act of transferring a copy, and you may at your option offer warranty protection in exchange for a fee.

2. You may modify your copy or copies of the library's source code as you wish, forming a work based on the library, and copy and distribute such modifications or work under the terms of Section 1 above, provided that you also meet all of these conditions:

a) The modified work must itself be a software library.

b) You must cause the files modified to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

c) You must cause the whole of the work to be licensed at no charge to all third parties under the terms of this license.

d) If a facility in the modified library refers to a function or a table of data to be supplied by an application program that uses the facility, other than those which are hard-coded into the library, you must make it clear in the documentation of that facility what users need to do in order to use the facility. If the facility is hard-coded into the library, you must make it clear in the documentation of that facility what users need to do in order to use the facility.

(For example, a function in a library to compute square roots has a documentation that says "Square root of x: computes the square root of x. Requires appropriate header files and includes." If the function is hard-coded into the library, the documentation must be updated, if the application does not supply it, the square root function must still compute square roots.)

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If identifiable sections of that work are not derived from the library, by themselves, then that section, and its derivatives, do not apply to these conditions. The requirements apply only to the parts which are derived from the library. The distribution of the whole must be on the terms of this license, with permission for other licenses applied to the parts which are not derived from the library.

3. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the library or a work based on the library, except as expressly provided in writing by you to a recipient. You may not sublicense the library or a work based on the library, except as expressly provided in writing by you to a recipient. You may not sublicense the library or a work based on the library, except as expressly provided in writing by you to a recipient.

4. You may copy and distribute the library (or a portion or derivative of it) in object code form under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above provided that you accompany it with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, which must be distributed under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above on a medium customarily used for software interchange.

If distribution of object code is made by offering access to copy from a designated place, then offering equivalent access to copy the source code from the same place satisfies the requirements of this section. A program that contains no derivative of any portion of the library, but is designed to work with the library by being compiled or linked with it, is called a "work that uses the library". Such a work, in addition to the source code for the library, must also include the source code for the work that uses the library, and must be distributed under the terms of this license.

However, linking a "work that uses the library" with the library is not considered to be distribution of the library, provided that it contains portions of the library, rather than a "work that uses the library". The exception to this rule applies to the library's source code and to the library's source code.

When a work that uses the library uses material from a header file that is part of the library, the object code for the work may be a derivative work of the library, even though the source code is not. The source code for the work must be distributed under the terms of this license, or if the work is itself a library, the source code must be distributed under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above on a medium customarily used for software interchange.

If distribution of object code is made by offering access to copy from a designated place, then offering equivalent access to copy the source code from the same place satisfies the requirements of this section. A program that contains no derivative of any portion of the library, but is designed to work with the library by being compiled or linked with it, is called a "work that uses the library". Such a work, in addition to the source code for the library, must also include the source code for the work that uses the library, and must be distributed under the terms of this license.

5. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the library or a work based on the library, except as expressly provided in writing by you to a recipient. You may not sublicense the library or a work based on the library, except as expressly provided in writing by you to a recipient. You may not sublicense the library or a work based on the library, except as expressly provided in writing by you to a recipient.

use both them and the library together in an executable that you distribute.

7. You may place library facilities that are a work based on the library alongside a larger library together with other library facilities not covered by this license, and distribute such a combined library. You may also place the library and the work based on the library and any of the other library facilities in otherwise permitted, and provided you do so in compliance with the license.

8. Accompany the combined library with a copy of the same work based on the library, consistent with any other library facilities. This must be distributed under the terms of the license above.

9. Give prominent notice with the combined library of the fact that you are distributing a work based on the library, and that you are distributing it under the terms of this license.

10. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, link with, or distribute the library except as expressly permitted under this license. Any attempt otherwise to copy, modify, sublicense, link with, or distribute the library is prohibited, and you will incur automatic liability for any rights under this license. However, parties who have received copies, or rights, from you under this license do not have their license rescinded.

11. You are not required to accept this license, since you have not agreed to it, but you do not have any other choice to do so. You may distribute the library of your own choice under the terms of your own license agreement for distributing the library if you wish to do so, and all of the terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification of the library of works based on it.

12. Each time you redistribute the library (or any work based on the library), the recipient automatically receives a license from the original licensor to copy, distribute, link with or modify the library subject to the same conditions for copying, distribution and modification as the recipient's license of the rights, granted herein, for any and all purposes for which such rights are granted pursuant to this license.

13. If, as a consequence of a court judgment or allegation of patent infringement or for any other reason (not limited to patent infringement), you need to sue, commence or face litigation, you must assume you do so in and to protect the interests of the particular user, licensee, distributor or recipient of the particular copy of the library (or any work based on the library) being distributed in the lawsuit. You may not sue to enforce your patent rights against any recipient of the library, or to prevent the recipient from using the library or any work based on the library. You may not sue to enforce your patent rights against any recipient of the library, or to prevent the recipient from using the library or any work based on the library.

14. Each version of this license is licensed under the same license as the version of the library to which it applies in other circumstances. It is not the purpose of this license to induce you to infringe any patent or other property right claim or to conduct activities of any kind that are prohibited by applicable law. If you are unable to do so, you may not distribute the library or any work based on the library. If you are unable to do so, you may not distribute the library or any work based on the library. If you are unable to do so, you may not distribute the library or any work based on the library. If you are unable to do so, you may not distribute the library or any work based on the library.

15. This license is intended to be a thorough clear what is believed to be a consequence of the rest of this license.

16. If you distribute the library or any work based on the library, you must include a copy of this license in the distribution. If you are unable to do so, you may not distribute the library or any work based on the library. If you are unable to do so, you may not distribute the library or any work based on the library. If you are unable to do so, you may not distribute the library or any work based on the library.

17. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the Lesser General Public License from time to time. Each new version will be labeled in spirit to the previous version but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the library specifies a version number of this license which applies to it and you use that version, you must use the version of the license and the Lesser General Public License that applies to the library. If the library does not specify a license version number, you must use the version of the license and the Lesser General Public License that applies to the library.

18. If you wish to incorporate parts of the library into other free programs, you may distribute copies of the library under the terms of the license and the Lesser General Public License, or you may distribute copies of the library under the terms of the license and the Lesser General Public License, or you may distribute copies of the library under the terms of the license and the Lesser General Public License, or you may distribute copies of the library under the terms of the license and the Lesser General Public License.

19. IN NO EVENT SHALL THE LIBRARY BE HELD LIABLE FOR DAMAGES OF ANY KIND, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO, GENERAL, SPECIAL, INCIDENTAL, AND CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES, ARISING OUT OF OR IN CONNECTION WITH THE USE OR PERFORMANCE OF THIS SOFTWARE.

20. END OF TERMS AND CONDITIONS

How to Apply These Terms to Your New Library

If you develop a new library, and you want it to be of the greatest possible use to the public, we recommend making it free software that carries our distribution and copying permissions. You can do so by putting the appropriate copyright notice in your library, and by using the Lesser General Public License.

To modify these terms, attach the following notice to the library. It is advised to attach them in the start of each source file to most effectively convey the declaration of warranty, and each file should have its own "copyright" line and a pointer to where the full notice is found.

See how to give the library's name and a brief idea of what it does: Copyright (C) <year> <name of author>

This library is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU Lesser General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation, either version 2.1 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

Version 2, June 1991

Copyright (C) 1989, 1991 Free Software Foundation, Inc. License is granted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of this license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to make sure you have the freedom to share and copy it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and copy free software to make sure the software is free for all users. This General Public License applies to most free software.

Foundation's software and to any other program which authors consent to modify. (Some authors have provided alternatives to users by providing a separate license for their programs.)

When you copy, modify or distribute the software, you are obliged to give the same freedoms to others. The GNU General Public License is designed to make sure that you have the freedom to do so. You must make sure that you give the same freedoms to others. You must make sure that you give the same freedoms to others.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid copying of the software. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the software, or if you modify it.

For example, if you copy a file, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that you give the same freedoms to others. You must make sure that you give the same freedoms to others.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you the license which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.

Also, to make sure you are free to change the program, we add the sole copyright for this free software. If the software is modified by someone else and passed on, we want to make sure you are notified so you can keep the program free. You must make sure that you give the same freedoms to others.

Finally, we want to make sure you are free to change the program. We want to make sure you are free to change the program. We want to make sure you are free to change the program.

Preamble

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software. The GNU General Public License applies to most of the Free Software Foundation's software, and to any program that carries one of its licenses. You should always respect the freedoms that this license grants you, and you should make it easy for others to do so. You can always copy, distribute, and modify your programs, as long as you comply with the restrictions of this license. You can also combine programs covered by this license with non-GPL programs, as long as you do not combine them in a way that would allow the non-GPL program to exercise the freedoms granted by the GPL. You should always respect the freedoms that this license grants you, and you should make it easy for others to do so.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. The GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software. You should always respect the freedoms that this license grants you, and you should make it easy for others to do so.

Section 7: TERMINATION. This license gives you the right to copy, distribute, and modify your programs, as long as you comply with the restrictions of this license. You can also combine programs covered by this license with non-GPL programs, as long as you do not combine them in a way that would allow the non-GPL program to exercise the freedoms granted by the GPL. Section 8: GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE. This license gives you the right to copy, distribute, and modify your programs, as long as you comply with the restrictions of this license. Preamble
The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software to run your business or the community. All users of the GNU General Public License agree to abide by its terms. This license applies to most software, but not to software licensed under other licenses. (Some other free software licenses are covered by the GNU General Public License instead.) You can apply it to your program, too.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. The General Public License is designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for that service) and to make sure you receive source code or can get it if you wish. You may not charge for your copies of the software, but you may charge for other services you provide, such as consulting, debugging, or training.

You are permitted to copy and distribute verbatim copies of the license document, but changing it is not allowed.

Section 0. You may redistribute copies of this license, and you may use it to protect your program.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this software. If the software is modified by someone else and passed on, we want its recipients to know that what they have is not the original author's responsibility.

Finally, we want to make it clear that there is no warranty for the program, and you should not receive warranty for the program. If you are a programmer or user, you should be aware of the GNU General Public License for the program, if necessary. Here is a sample of the notice:

control compilation and installation of the executable. However, as a special exception, the source code distributed need not include anything that is normally distributed (in either source or binary form) with the particular operating system on which the executable runs, unless the component itself accompanies the executable.

If distribution of executable or object code is made by offering copies to the public, a distribution must be made from the same place and distribution of the source code must be made from the same place as is required to offer the executable or object code.

4. The may not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program except as expressly provided under this License. Any attempt to exercise these rights without the express written permission of the copyright holder is prohibited. This license will not have its terms terminated as long as such person complies with the above conditions.

5. You are not required to accept this License, since you have not signed it. However, nothing grants you permission to modify or distribute the Program or its derivative works. Those actions are prohibited by law. If you do not accept this License, you may still use the Program, but you must not distribute it as such, and all its uses must be subject to the original copyright notice and license.

Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), the recipient automatically receives the license from the original licensor to copy, distribute or modify the Program subject to these terms and conditions. You may not remove any of these restrictions on the recipient's exercise of the rights granted herein. You are also responsible for enforcing compliance by third parties to these terms and conditions.

7. If, as a consequence of a court judgment or allegation of patent infringement, you are unable to comply with any of the conditions of this License, you may nevertheless distribute copies of the Program if you have taken reasonable steps to ensure that the recipient is notified in advance by the methods of distribution you use. In that case, you must also provide a copy of this License with each copy of the Program. You may also provide additional copies of the Program to a third party for whom you have made a special arrangement, provided that you notify the copyright holder of your arrangement and that you make a good faith effort to ensure that the recipient is notified in advance by the methods of distribution you use. In that case, you must also provide a copy of this License with each copy of the Program.

If any section of this license is held invalid or unenforceable under applicable law, the balance of the license is intended to apply and the section as a whole is intended to apply to other jurisdictions.

It is not the purpose of this license to induce you to infringe any copyright or other proprietary right, to violate any applicable law, or to circumvent any technology that is intended to enforce the rights of a copyright owner. This license is intended to make clear the rights of a copyright owner and to make it easy to obtain the source code for the program to which the license applies. This license is not intended to restrict the rights of a copyright owner to sue for infringement or to enforce any applicable law.

This license is intended to make thoroughly clear what is believed to be a consequence of the fact of this license.

8. If the distribution and/or use of the Program is restricted in certain countries either by patent or by copyright law, or by applicable law, or by government action, you may reproduce and distribute the Program in a form that does not violate the applicable law, provided that you clearly indicate in the source code and in any accompanying documentation that the program has been modified to comply with the applicable law.

9. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be similar in spirit to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

Each version is given a distinguishing version number. If the Program specifies a version number of this License which applies to it and you wish to use a later version, you may do so if and only if you contact the author of the Program and/or the copyright holder of the Program to request permission. If the Program does not specify a version number of this License, you may use any later version published by the Free Software Foundation.

10. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs, you may do so under the terms of this license, provided you clearly indicate in the source code and in any accompanying documentation that the program has been modified to comply with the applicable law.

11. BECAUSE THE PROGRAM IS LICENSED FREE OF CHARGE, THERE IS NO WARRANTY FOR THE PROGRAM, TO THE EXTENT PERMITTED BY APPLICABLE LAW. EXCEPT WHEN OTHERWISE STATED IN WRITING THE COPYRIGHT HOLDERS AND/OR OTHER PARTIES PROVIDE THE PROGRAM "AS IS" WITHOUT WARRANTY OF ANY KIND, EITHER EXPRESSED OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING, BUT NOT LIMITED TO, THE IMPLIED WARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY AND FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. THE ENTIRE RISK AS TO THE QUALITY AND PERFORMANCE OF THE PROGRAM IS WITH YOU. SHOULD THE PROGRAM PROVE DEFECTIVE, YOU ASSUME THE COST OF ALL NECESSARY SERVICING, REPAIR OR CORRECTION.

12. Preamble
The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change free software to suit your system or to help you to leave the freedom you wish to give to the next user. That way, you can help others to enjoy the freedom and benefits of Free Software. The GNU General Public License is a license for users of the GNU operating system and for other free software. It is intended to ensure that the source code of the program you receive is always available for you to study, to modify, and to redistribute copies of it to others, subject to certain restrictions on copying, distribution and modification.

When you speak of free software, you are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software and charge for that service if you wish; that you receive source code or can get it if you wish; that you can modify the software or use pieces of it; and that you can distribute copies of your modifications.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid others to do what we do not want to allow, to protect the rights of those who share their copies of the software, and of you. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the software, or of your modifications.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, you must give the recipients all the rights that you have. You must make sure that they, too, receive or can get the source code. And you must also make sure that they know their rights.

Also, to make sure you are indeed entitled to share and change your copies of the program, you must keep this document, which defines the conditions under which you may redistribute copies of the program, in the same form and under the same conditions as you receive it. If you do not do this, you will have no right to receive copies of the program, and you will not be able to distribute copies of it.

Finally, any free program is threatened constantly by software patents. We wish to avoid the danger that patents holders use their power to restrict your freedoms. Our General Public Licenses were designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (with charge if you wish) if you wish, that you receive source code or can get it if you wish, that you can modify the software or use pieces of it, and that you can distribute copies of your modifications.

access to copy from a designated place, then offering equivalent access to copy the source code from the same place courts an indication of the source code was through third parties are not required to do so.

4. You may not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program except as expressly provided under this License. Any attempt otherwise to copy, modify, sublicense or distribute the Program is void, and will automatically terminate your rights under this License. However, parties who have received copies of rights from you under this License will not have their licenses terminated so long as they continue to comply with this License.

5. You are not required to accept this License, since you have not signed it. However, nothing else grants you permission to modify or distribute the Program or its derivative works. Those actions are prohibited by law. If you do not accept this License, then your act of modifying or distributing the Program is itself prohibited by law, and all your actions from that point forward will be void by law as a violation of this License.

6. Each time you redistribute the Program for any work based on the Program, the recipient automatically receives a license from the original licensor to copy, modify or distribute the Program subject to restrictions on the recipients' exercise of the rights granted herein. You are responsible for enforcing compliance with this provision for all recipients.

7. If, as a consequence of a court judgment or allegation of patent infringement or for any other reason (not limited to patent infringement) conditions are imposed on you (whether by court order, agreement or otherwise) that contradict the provisions of this License, you must still comply with the conditions of this License. If you cannot do so, you may, as an alternate means for exercising your rights under this License, choose to stop all copying of the Program. For example, if you cannot do so because you have received copies of rights from a third party, you may still distribute the Program as you did before, but you must stop all copying and distribution of the Program by you.

If any portion of this section is held invalid or unenforceable under any particular circumstance, the balance of the section is intended to apply and the section as a whole is intended to apply in other circumstances.

It is not the purpose of this section to induce you to infringe any patent or other property right claims or to engage in any activity that is prohibited by law whether by express or implied limitation.

8. This License applies to any distribution of the Program by you in whole or in part. It also applies to any distribution of the Program by you in whole or in part through a third party. You are not responsible for enforcing compliance with this provision for all recipients.

9. The Free Software Foundation may publish revised and/or new versions of the General Public License from time to time. Such new versions will be published in a form similar to the present version, but may differ in detail to address new problems or concerns.

10. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs, these distribution conditions are different. Write to the author of the Program, or to the Free Software Foundation, for more information. We will make a separate arrangement for licensing from the Free Software Foundation, provided you agree to the terms of such an arrangement.

WE WARRANT NOTHING.

11. BECAUSE THE PROGRAM IS LICENSED FREE OF CHARGE, THERE IS NO WARRANTY FOR THE PROGRAM, TO THE EXTENT PERMITTED BY APPLICABLE LAW. How to Apply These Terms to Your New Programs

If you develop a new program, and you want it to be of the greatest benefit to the public, the best way to achieve this is to make it free software which everyone can redistribute and change under these terms.

To do so, attach the following notices to the program. It is safest to attach them to the start of each source file to most effectively convey the attribution of the work to the appropriate person or entity.

One line to give the program's name and a brief idea of what it does:

Copyright (C) 2001 by author's name

This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under the terms of the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation; either version 2 of the License, or (at your option) any later version.

This program is distributed in the hope that it will be useful, but WITHOUT ANY WARRANTY; without even the implied warranty of MERCHANTABILITY or FITNESS FOR A PARTICULAR PURPOSE. See the GNU General Public License for more details.

You should have received a copy of the GNU General Public License along with this program; if not, write to the Free Software Foundation, Inc., 59 Temple Place, Suite 330, Boston, MA 02111-1307 USA

Also add information on how to contact you by electronic and paper mail.

If the program is interactive, make it enter a short notice like this when it starts in an interactive mode:

Copyright (C) 2001 by author's name
This program is free software; you can redistribute it and/or modify it under certain conditions. See the GNU General Public License for details.
This program comes with ABSOLUTELY NO WARRANTY; for details type 'show w'.
This is free software, and you are welcome to redistribute it under certain conditions. Type 'show c' for details.

The graphical user interface, show w and show c, should show the appropriate parts of the General Public License. Of course, the license you may use any one of the graphical user interface, show w and show c, may be different.

NOTES

1) This license does not cover the so-called "transmission" applications that use a license protocol to the user, but the license is intended to be used with such applications. For more information on this subject, see the file "License/Exceptions" for details.

2) Also note that the GPL and the other licenses are copyrighted by the Free Software Foundation, and you are not allowed to use the license in any other way than to refer to the GNU General Public License as published by the Free Software Foundation. If you are actually writing it, you should add "written by" to the license text.

3) Like many other projects, GNU has a tradition of including the license text in the source code of all files. This has only been done in the source code with a few exceptions, but will be done in the future. If you wish to use the license as part of your project, you should include it in the same way the license is referred to by a number of applications. The original and the license, with the address information, ... which makes automatic processing a nightmare.

4) To make this easier, each license header in the source files will be replaced with a single line reference to the license identifier. The license identifier is a unique file name. For example, the license identifier for the GPL is "GPL" and the license identifier for the LGPL is "LGPL".

5) The license identifier in the source file should be defined by a single line reference to the license identifier. For example, the license identifier for the GPL is "GPL" and the license identifier for the LGPL is "LGPL".

If a "GPL License Identifier" line references more than one Unique License Identifier, then this means that the redistribution may be used under the terms of either of these Licenses. I. e. with GPL License Identifier: GPL-2.0 AND GPL-3.0

You can choose between GPL-2.0 and GPL-3.0 license.

We use the GPL License Identifier here; these are available at:

When run, you must cause it, when started running for such interactive use as the most ordinary way, to print or display an announcement including an appropriate copyright notice and a warranty and that users may redistribute the program under these terms, and that the program is distributed in source code form. This announcement must appear on the output of the program each time the program starts. It must appear in a window or screen, and must be printed out each time the program starts up if it is running in a window or screen. It must appear in a window or screen, and must be printed out each time the program starts up if it is running in a window or screen. It must appear in a window or screen, and must be printed out each time the program starts up if it is running in a window or screen.

These requirements apply to the modified work as a whole. If identifiable sections of that work are derived from the Program, you must prominently display those sections in the modified work. You must prominently display those sections in the modified work. You must prominently display those sections in the modified work. You must prominently display those sections in the modified work.

1. You may not charge a fee for the distribution of the program or for the distribution of the program in source code form.

2. You may copy and distribute the Program (or a work based on it), under Section 1 as object code or executable form under the terms of Section 1 and 2 above provided that you also do one of the following:

- a) Accompany it with the complete corresponding machine-readable source code, which must be distributed under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above, on a medium customarily used for software interchange; or
b) Accompany it with a written offer, valid for at least three years, to provide to any individual who requests and pays a fee for a copy of the source code, which must be distributed under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above on a medium customarily used for software interchange; or
c) Accompany it with the information you provided as to the offer to distribute the source code, which must be distributed under the terms of Sections 1 and 2 above and you must also take reasonable steps to ensure that this information is received by the intended recipients.

The source code for a work means the preferred form of the work for making modifications to it. For an executable work, complete source code means all the source code for all modules it contains, plus any associated interface definition files, plus the scripts used to control compilation and execution of the executable. However, as a special exception, the source code distributed need not include anything that is normally distributed (in either source or binary form) with the particular operating system on which the executable runs, unless that component itself accompanies the executable.

4. The may not copy, modify, sublicense, or distribute the Program except as expressly provided under this License. Any attempt otherwise to copy, modify, sublicense or distribute the Program is void, and will automatically terminate your rights under this License. However, you will not be held liable for any actions taken by you in good faith to defend or assert your copyright claims.

5. You are not required to accept this License, since you have not signed it. However, nothing else grants you permission to modify or distribute the Program or its derivative works. These actions are prohibited by law if you do not accept this License. Therefore, by modifying or distributing the Program (or any work based on the Program), you indicate your acceptance of this License to do so, and all its obligations and warranties.

6. Each time you redistribute the Program (or any work based on the Program), you must prominently display the following notice on all copies of the program you distribute:

7. If, as a consequence of your exercise of the rights of distribution or copying, you cease to receive a benefit derived from any patent license that you have received, you must, for any and all purposes you have caused with respect to the distribution of the Program, to cease exercising your rights of distribution and copying.

8. If you wish to incorporate parts of the Program into other free programs, these distribution conditions are different. Write to the author to ask for permission. For software which is copyrighted by the author, you must request permission from the author to use the code.

The licenses for most software are designed to take away your freedom to share and change it. By contrast, the GNU General Public License is intended to guarantee your freedom to share and change any software you use. To make sure you are using software licensed under the GPL, we have written this license which will be distributed with each copy of the software. If you do not wish to be bound by this license, write to the Free Software Foundation to request that you receive a copy of the GNU General Public License instead. You can also find a copy of the license at <http://www.fsf.org/licenses/gpl.html>.

When we speak of free software, we are referring to freedom, not price. Our General Public Licenses are designed to make sure that you have the freedom to distribute copies of free software (and charge for them if you wish), that you can change the software or use pieces of it in new free programs, and that you know you can do these things.

To protect your rights, we need to make restrictions that forbid anyone to deny you these rights or to ask you to surrender the rights. These restrictions translate to certain responsibilities for you if you distribute copies of the software, or if you modify it.

For example, if you distribute copies of such a program, whether gratis or for a fee, you must also distribute copies of the original source code. You must also make sure that you receive what you send to the copyright holder. You must also make sure that you receive what you send to the copyright holder. You must also make sure that you receive what you send to the copyright holder.

We protect your rights with two steps: (1) copyright the software, and (2) offer you this License which gives you legal permission to copy, distribute and/or modify the software.

Also, for each author's protection and ours, we want to make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this free software. If the software is modified by someone else and the modified version is distributed, the original author is not responsible for the problems introduced by others who do not understand the program's limitations. To protect your rights, we need to make certain that everyone understands that there is no warranty for this free software.

Finally, we want to make it clear that any patent rights we have for software must be licensed for everyone's free use or not licensed at all.

The precise terms and conditions for copying, distribution and modification follow.

GNU GENERAL PUBLIC LICENSE

TERMS AND CONDITIONS FOR COPYING, DISTRIBUTION AND MODIFICATION

0. This License applies to any program or other work which contains copyrightable material licensed under the terms of this General Public License. The Program, below, refers to any such program or work, and a derivative work under the Program means a work containing the Program or a portion based on the Program. Each time you copy, modify or redistribute the Program into a new form or medium, you must publish the Program in such a way that you can easily fulfill the conditions of this License. For example, if you use a program, you must make it available to others under the terms of this License, and you must make it available to others under the terms of this License.

1. You may copy and distribute verbatim copies of the Program's source code as you see fit, provided that you copy the entire text of this License, including the copyright notice and date, and you also make available under the terms of this License a copy of each copy of the Program that you distribute. You may charge a fee for copying and distributing copies of the Program's source code, provided that you charge no more than your cost of copying and distributing the source code. You may charge a fee for copying and distributing copies of the Program's source code, provided that you charge no more than your cost of copying and distributing the source code.

2. You may modify your copy or copies of the Program or any portion of it, thus forming a derivative work based on the Program, and copy and distribute such modifications and the Program under the terms of this License as you see fit, provided that you also make available under the terms of this License a copy of each copy of the Program that you distribute.

3. You may cause the modified files to carry prominent notices stating that you changed the files and the date of any change.

4. You may not use any work that you distribute or publish, that in whole or in part contains or is derived from the Program or any part thereof, to advertise or promote the activities of a company, product, or service, unless the Program is used for advertising or promotional purposes, in which case you must use only the limited amount of text of the Program that is necessary to identify the company, product, or service.

- All the documentation in the doc directory and most of the XZ Utils specific documentation files in public directories are in the public domain.
- Translated messages are in the public domain.
- The build system contains public domain files, and files that are under GNU GPLv3 or GNU GPLv2. None of these files end up in the binaries being built.
- Test files and test code in the tests directory, and debugging utilities in the debug directory are in the public domain.
- The extra directory may contain public domain files, and files that are under various free software licenses.

You can do whatever you want with the files that have been put into the public domain. If you find public domain code highly problematic, the fact of copyright likely problems, you may be able to find lawyers.

As usual, this software is provided "as is", without any warranty. If you copy significant amounts of public domain code from XZ Utils into your projects, without giving this someone in your software in public domain, it is in your own interest. The GNU GPLv3 is a license that is in the public domain, but the fact of copyright likely problems, you may be able to find lawyers.

This software includes code from XZ Utils <http://tukaani.org/xz/>.

The following license terms are included in the following files:

- COPYING.GPLv2: GNU General Public License version 2
- COPYING.GPLv3: GNU General Public License version 3
- COPYING.GPLv2: GNU General Public License version 3

Note that the following copyright notice for the test files and code files that are copyrighted, but it is possible that some of the license notices are not up to date. It is possible that some of the license notices contain no copyrighted code from the XZ Utils source package.

lib 1.2.11

lib data compression library

lib 1.2.11 is a general purpose data compression library. All the code is thread safe. The data format used by the lib library is described by RFC 863 (RFC 863, RFC 864, RFC 865, RFC 866, RFC 867, RFC 868, RFC 869, RFC 870, RFC 871, RFC 872, RFC 873, RFC 874, RFC 875, RFC 876, RFC 877, RFC 878, RFC 879, RFC 880, RFC 881, RFC 882, RFC 883, RFC 884, RFC 885, RFC 886, RFC 887, RFC 888, RFC 889, RFC 890, RFC 891, RFC 892, RFC 893, RFC 894, RFC 895, RFC 896, RFC 897, RFC 898, RFC 899, RFC 900, RFC 901, RFC 902, RFC 903, RFC 904, RFC 905, RFC 906, RFC 907, RFC 908, RFC 909, RFC 910, RFC 911, RFC 912, RFC 913, RFC 914, RFC 915, RFC 916, RFC 917, RFC 918, RFC 919, RFC 920, RFC 921, RFC 922, RFC 923, RFC 924, RFC 925, RFC 926, RFC 927, RFC 928, RFC 929, RFC 930, RFC 931, RFC 932, RFC 933, RFC 934, RFC 935, RFC 936, RFC 937, RFC 938, RFC 939, RFC 940, RFC 941, RFC 942, RFC 943, RFC 944, RFC 945, RFC 946, RFC 947, RFC 948, RFC 949, RFC 950, RFC 951, RFC 952, RFC 953, RFC 954, RFC 955, RFC 956, RFC 957, RFC 958, RFC 959, RFC 960, RFC 961, RFC 962, RFC 963, RFC 964, RFC 965, RFC 966, RFC 967, RFC 968, RFC 969, RFC 970, RFC 971, RFC 972, RFC 973, RFC 974, RFC 975, RFC 976, RFC 977, RFC 978, RFC 979, RFC 980, RFC 981, RFC 982, RFC 983, RFC 984, RFC 985, RFC 986, RFC 987, RFC 988, RFC 989, RFC 990, RFC 991, RFC 992, RFC 993, RFC 994, RFC 995, RFC 996, RFC 997, RFC 998, RFC 999, RFC 1000).

All functions of the compression library are documented in the file `libdata-compress.h`. A sample program is included in the file `libdata-compress-test.c`. The library is written in C. The compression library itself is composed of all source files in the `src` directory.

To compile all files and run the test program, follow the instructions given at the end of README. For more information, see the file `libdata-compress.h`. If you have any questions, don't hesitate to ask the author(s) for more information.

Questions about lib should be sent to libdata-compress@tukaani.org, or to Gilles Villant gilles.villant@tukaani.org. Before reporting a problem, please check the file `libdata-compress.h` to verify that you have the latest version of lib, otherwise get the latest version and check whether the problem still exists or not.

PLEASE read the file `libdata-compress.h` before asking for help. Mark Nelson marknelson@tukaani.org wrote an article about lib for the Jan. 1997 issue of www.tukaani.org/xz/. A copy of the article is available at <http://www.tukaani.org/xz/libdata-compress.h>.

The changes made in version 1.2.11 are documented in the file `libdata-compress.h`. Unpublished third party contributions are provided in directory `contrib`.

lib is available in Java using the `java-libdata-compress` package, documented at <http://java.sun.com/javase/6/docs/api/com/tukaani/xz/libdata-compress/package-summary.html>.

A Perl interface to lib written by Paul Marquese marquese@tukaani.org is available at <http://search.cpan.org/pkgid/P3/Compress-Lib/>.

A Python interface to lib written by A.M. Kuchling kuchling@tukaani.org is available in Python 2.5 and later versions, see <http://docs.python.org/library/xz.html>.

lib is built into `tar`: <http://wiki.tcl.tk/4658>.

An experimental package to read and write files in `zip` format, written on top of lib, by Gilles Villant gilles.villant@tukaani.org, is available in the `contrib` directory of lib.

Notes for some targets:

- For Windows DLL versions, please use `win32dll` flag.
- For 64-bit Tru64, `deflate.o` must be compiled without any optimization. With `-O`, one linking test fails. The test option is `NO_OPT` with the `gcc` compiler flag. The compiler bug has been reported to ICC.
- lib doesn't work with gcc 4.8.3 on a NEC SPARC64 user OS/2.2.1 in work when compiled with `icc`.
- On Debian GNU/Linux (kernel 2.6.32), the `cc` option `-std=c99` is necessary to get `gzip` working correctly. This is done by configure.
- lib doesn't work on HP-UX 9.0 with some versions of `libc`. It works with other versions. Use `libc` test to check your compiler.
- `gzip` is not supported on RISCOS or BEOS.
- For PalmOS, see <http://palmtos.sourceforge.net/>.

Acknowledgments:

The deflate format used by lib was defined by Phil Katz. The deflate and zlib specifications were written by L. Peter Deutsch. Thanks to all the people who tested lib, and reported various improvements on lib. They are:
